Very Good—For Foreigners. Communists and Troubles. Lay in Supplies. Says Mussolini to F. D. R.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

EXCELLENT NEWS for working people, originating in our New Deal, but unfortunately, workingmen that get the benefit of it do not live in the U. S. A.

A well-known newspaper man, back from a flight around South America, writes this:

"One thing was interesting. A representative of an English firm having to do with the purchase of cotton at Natal, Brazil, told me that since the New Deal went into effect they have doubled their cotton production and are now getting twice the former price for it. This has resulted in doing away with unemployment and has stimulated other lines of industry.

"For instance, he said, he sold sixty-four trucks in July, which was the largest amount of business in this line that he has ever done in the same period of time. They are hoping that we will continue our curtailed production policy until after next year. They plan to again double their production the coming season, after which, he says, 'we will have the market so that you will never get it away from us.'"

Much wisdom in our British brethren. We should send a professor to England.

MANY AMERICANS take Communism in the United States most seriously. Governor Green, of Rhode Island, even says his state is "facing a Communist uprising." Fortunately, under the worst conditions, the state's militia, backed by the Army of the United States and its airplanes, should be able to deal with that situation.

There was a great deal of Communistic talk in San Francisco while the strike was on. But it melted away rapidly when citizens took definite action to express disapproval of Communistic teachings.

IN BURLINGTON, North Carolina, five striking pickets were wounded with bayonets, four arrested, many made uncomfortable by tear gas.

In all disturbances, "strike violence" included, now and in future, tear gas and more dangerous gas, with the help of flying machines, will make a great difference in the history of labor and other difficulties. Any power that controls the air will be the dominating power, and presumably government will have air control, at least until some really important revolutionary movement comes along.

In Woonsocket, R. I., more trouble is expected. National Guardsmen patrol the streets, theatres and drinking bars are closed by military order, to prevent crowds gathering, citizens are warned to stay indoors after dark. Officials blamed the "sudden outburst of terror" on "foreign" emissaries, which means "Communists."

TYPESETTERS' UNIONS in Chicago want government to investigate "mergers of newspapers," because mergers deprive printers and others of work.

Newspapers are not "merged," they DIE, like horses, cows and human beings. Sometimes they die prematurely, when the wrong newspaper man, or somebody who is not a newspaper man, gets hold of them. A newspaper's death is called a "merger," because that saves the pride of some newspaper failure.

Government might save newspapers from being "merged in death" by buying and running them. But that would be expensive, and if the government does not believe that, let it try.

THIS SHOULD interest many.

Mr. B. Forman, of Rochester, N. Y., lunched yesterday in New York with one of the most important merchants in the United States. The New York merchant said to Mr. Forman:

"You can judge what I think by the fact that I have just ordered a thousand dollars worth of groceries, canned goods, etc., sent to my own house for family use. Everything you eat is going up and going up fast. People will save money by laying in supplies now. For instance, the price of sausage has gone up seven cents a pound in one week."

It might be well to get in a few dozen cans of soup, beans, plus sugar, coffee, tea and supplies of other things, if you have the money. While things you eat are certain to cost more, your money will probably be worth less before long. Food dearer, money cheaper, bad combination.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT will be mildly interested in an article published in Mussolini's newspaper, Popolo D'Italia, because Mussolini wrote the arti-

HOT SHOWER FATAL TO WOMAN

Gin Bottles Discovered In Apartment, Sleuths Say

What transpired in the suite occupied by Mrs. Frances B. Klee, 37, in the fashionable Ambassador Apartments, 4733 Center avenue, before her scalded body was discovered last night, remained somewhat of a mystery to detectives investigating her death today.

But they and coroner's officials are certain the pajama-clad woman was not murdered.

Following an autopsy at the morgue, it was said Mrs. Klee had died from shock when she stepped under the scalding water of a shower bath. She fell into a tub.

FRIEND HELD FOR QUIZ

Meanwhile, Michael Pascarella, 47, grocer, of 218 North Craig street, a friend of Mrs. Klee, who found her body, was given a hearing before Magistrate Anthony Lucas in Central Police Court.

Upon request of detectives, Pascarella was held over pending a further investigation.

The woman's husband, Edwin Klee, had not been living with her for some time. He is in the sign business and has an office at 302 Benedum-Trees Building. He was on a business trip to Westfield, N. Y., today, but promised detectives over the telephone to return at once and take charge of his wife's body.

Evidently there had been drinking in progress in the Klee apartment some time prior to her death, for investigators found an empty gin bottle in the kitchen and another gin bottle, partly filled, and some glasses in another room.

Mrs. Klee's purse was found, too. It contained one cent.

When the sleuths and Deputy Coroners Stanley Guzenski and John T. McQuaid entered Mrs. Klee's apartment on the fifth floor they reported the bathroom filled with steam.

The investigators quoted Pascarella, father of six children, as saying:

"I was driving by the apartment house when I looked up and noticed steam escaping

Miss Coulter In Spill at Horse Show

Miss Margaret Coulter, of Greensburg, noted for her horsemanship, took a bad spill this morning at the opening of the Westmoreland Hunt horse show on the polo grounds, Greensburg.

The hurdle fell on Miss Coulter, but she was not injured.

The rains had made the track muddy, and the going difficult for the horses.

Miss Coulter is the only woman on the committee for the horse show, which closes this evening. She is master of fox hounds for the Westmoreland Hunt.

J. W. Dowling, up on "Sunnybrook," also took a bad spill.

Tub Mystery Victim

MRS. FRANCES B. KLEE . . . . . SCALDED TO DEATH IN HOME

Mrs. Klee, found dead in the tub of her steam-filled bathroom in the Ambassador Apartments, 4733 Center avenue, last night, by her friend, Michael Pascarella, of the Bayard Apartments, 218 North Craig street.

DEATHSHIP'S LOG SOUGHT BY U. S.

'Amazing Confusion' Of Orders Charged During Fire

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Fresh disclosures appear today to be imminent in the Morro Castle investigation.

The Federal Grand Jury, which is investigating the burning of the Havana-to-New York luxury liner a week ago off the Jersey Coast with the loss of 134 or more lives, has subpensed William W. Tripp, an engineer cadet of the ship.

The Boston Record says in a copyrighted account, that Tripp escaped from the ship with the engine room log, and turned it over later to the Ward Line, which is operated the Morro Castle.

The Record quoted Martin Conboy, United States attorney, as saying he expected federal authorities to demand immediate production of the log book.

The newspaper said the missing log book shows an "amazing confusion" of orders at the time the fire was raging, the last of which would have left the Morro Castle turning in circles around her anchor. Tripp, a student at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was at the ship's telegraph board at the time the fire started.

New light on the tragedy also is expected to come from George Alagna, second radio operator on the Morro Castle, who was held as a material witness and released after he assured the authorities of his willingness to testify. Alagna said he will "tell the facts of what I saw," adding that he could say nothing which would "incriminate or libel anybody." He said:

"That is for the grand jury."

The Department of Commerce inquiry into the disaster, which was adjourned today along with the grand jury investigation, will be resumed on Monday, Dickerson Hoover, chief of the inspection service, said he will recall Acting Capt. Warms, of the Morro Castle, and his mates for further questioning.

GREEN RAPS JOHNSON IN STRIKE

NRA Chief Called 'Tool of Industry' For Attack

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—The President's textile inquiry board is better fitted than Gen. Hugh S. Johnson to decide whether the textile strike is justified, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said today in commenting on Johnson's assertion in New York that the strike was in direct violation of an understanding reached with labor last June. Green said:

"Labor can confidently await the inquiry board's report to the President."

Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the strike committee, assailed Johnson as a "tool" of industry. Gorman asked:

"Whoever expected anything else from Gen. Johnson? He is a member of the Cotton Textile Code Authority. Even though he never has attended a meeting of the authority he may be expected to stand with his partners in that body.

"Gen. Johnson and the ridiculous reports of the NRA Research and Planning Divi-

FOOTPRINTS LONE CLUE IN SPEER SLAYING

Mystery Bullet Fells Educator Reading In School Home

International News Service.

NORTHFIELD, Mass., Sept. 15.—With footprints their only clue, troopers pushed an intensive search in three states today for the unknown assassin who shot and killed Dr. Elliott Speer, noted educator and head master of the famous Mt. Hermon School and Seminary here, in the library of his home last night.

Completely at a loss for a motive for the murder, detectives had virtually no evidence to aid them. Dr. Speer, staggering from the library with a charge of buckshot in his chest, collapsed and died in his wife's arms without speaking.

The murderer sneaked through the shrubbery surrounding the house and fired at Dr. Speer with a shotgun through an open window. His footprints on the ground outside provided the only clue to his identity.

FATHER NOTED CHURCHMAN

Dr. Speer, who was 56 years old, was the son of the Rev. Dr. Robert Elliott Speer, of New York, secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church since 1891. The elder Speer, a theologist known throughout the world through his numerous books, formerly was president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America and during the war was chairman of the General Wartime Committee of Churches.

In the house at the time were the murdered educator's wife, the former Holly Welles, of Philadelphia; her father, Dr. A. J. Welles; her mother; two servants and the three Speer children.

Mrs. Speer and her parents told police they heard the shot, raced to the study and were just in time to meet him staggering from the room.

District Attorney Joseph T. Bartlett, of Greenfield; Albert Dasey, state detective, and troopers from the Northfield barracks went to the scene immediately. It was believed the assassin fled northward into the woods where the states of Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont meet, a few miles away.

Dr. Speer was head master of the Mt. Hermon School for Boys, founded by William Dwight Moody, famous evangelist. The school has pupils from all parts of the world. The school has a farm of several hundred acres.

FATHER KNOWN HERE

The father of the slain educator, a frequent visitor here, is one of the best known men in the Presbyterian Church. He has spoken in Pittsburgh Presbyterian churches on numerous occasions and took an active part in the sessions of the General Assembly when it was held in Pittsburgh three years ago.

The late Dr. Speer, not as well known as his father, was fast becoming one of the church's leading educators, according to the Rev. Dr. George W. Shelton, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, an intimate friend of the slain man. Prior to going to Northfield, Dr. Speer was student pastor at Lafayette College, Easton, Pa.

DIONNE DOCTOR WORRIED

CALLANDER, Ont., Sept. 15.—(AP.)—At least four of the Dionee quintuplets were feeling better today and apparently all five 110-day-old girls are making a slow recovery from intestinal toxemia.

But Dr. A. R. Dafoe said he is still concerned by the condition of little Annette.

The second heaviest of the babies, the child apparently had stopped losing weight and there were other hopeful signs. Her temperature last night was 99 degrees, but her condition, the north country physician said, must be regarded as serious.

The Dafoe hospital for the quintuplets was dedicated yesterday at ceremonies in which the medical profession gave tribute to the skill of the country practitioner.

The Ontario government presented each of the quintuplets with a complete outfit of winter clothing.

MELLON INCOME TAX UP AGAIN

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—The government plans to make another effort today to collect almost $2,000,000 from Andrew W. Mellon.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue arranged to file a petition with the Board of Tax Appeals. It claims the money is due from the former Treasury Secretary and ambassador to Great Britain on account of deficient income tax payments.

The assessment, for 1931, was made last spring after unsuccessful attempts to have Mellon indicted for alleged tax evasion. A Pittsburgh federal grand jury refused to return an indictment.

Mellon countered with a claim to the Board of Tax Appeals for a refund of approximately $140,000 of taxes already paid.

The government's petition, answering the Mellon claim, is a formal preliminary to a determination of the issue.

The government's claim is based on stock transactions in which Mellon asserted he incurred losses.

Freighter Battles Flames All Night

BALBOA, C. Z., Sept. 15.—(INS.)—After an all-night battle with fire raging in the holds of the British freighter, Bradburn, firemen today continued to flood the ship with water, slowly succeeding in extinguishing the blaze.

The ship's cargo of cotton was a total loss, and the ship itself was badly damaged. The vessel arrived yesterday after a speedy 500-mile dash back to Balboa upon discovery of the fire.

Ship Fire Suspects Hunted in London

LONDON, Sept. 15.—(INS.)—Police at Liverpool and other British ports, acting on request of New York authorities, are watching for "several men" wanted in connection with the burning of the Ward liner Morro Castle, the Daily Mail said in a Liverpool dispatch today.

ROOSEVELT SET FOR PARLEY

International News Service.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 15—President Roosevelt, a guest aboard Vincent Astor's yacht, the Nourmahal, steamed into waters off this point today and prepared to meet Secretary of War Dern and Maj. Gen. Fox Connor for a conference on textile strike conditions in Rhode Island.

If conditions warrant such action, the President planned to leave the Nourmahal, board a Navy destroyer and remain hereabouts in order to be in as close touch with developments as possible. The executive said as he left his Hyde Park home on the Hudson yesterday for Newport that he might even go to Providence on a destroyer.

The meeting between the President, his Secretary of War and Connor, who commands the Army's First Corps area, was to take place at Fort Adams near here. On the results of that meeting will depend the President's subsequent action.

Quieting reports from the strike-torn sectors of the state late yesterday led the President to believe he might be able to see the international yacht races, for which he came here.

KAY WELCOMES CHEVALIER

LE HAVRE, France, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Maurice Chevalier, film actor, was in such a hurry to see Kay Francis today that he left the Ile de France outside the harbor and rushed by motorboat to the dock where she was waiting.

Miss France, apparently very glad to see the French actor, was waiting at the pier with a chauffeur and an automobile. She and Chevalier drove off immediately in the direction of Paris.

In Hollywood last month Maurice Chevalier denied emphatically the report from Paris that he would mary Kay Francis soon. He asserted:

"It is utterly unso."

Police Hold Two As 'Hex' Doctors

LEBANON, Pa., Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Two alleged "hex doctors" are charged with promising to break "spells and charms" for gain.

They are Henry H. Becker, of near Five Points, to whom Jacob Short said yesterday he paid 75 cents to break a "hex" and Christ Allweine, of Strack's Dam, who David C. Donmoyer said charged him one dollar for an "incantation."

Firebug Sentenced For Blaze in Store

EBENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 15—(AP.)—John Schirato, of Nanty-Glo, charged with setting fire to his combination store and dwelling on May 6, 1932, in an effort to collect $5,000 worth of insurance, was sentenced to one to two years in jail after a Cambria County jury convicted him on an arson charge.

Drunks Wed? Not in Our Town, Cries Wellsburg

WELLSBURG, W. Va., Sept. 15.—If you can't hold your liquor, you young elopers who think you might need a drink or two or three before getting married—keep away from Wellsburg Courthouse until you're sober.

Not that anybody objects seriously to a prospective bride or groom taking a drink these days, oh, no.

Not that anybody objects to them taking two or three, so long as they take 'em in Ohio or Pennsylvania (repeal hasn't reached West Virginia yet).

But, if liquor makes you tonguetied or wabble in speech or posture, you can't get a marriage license.

So declared Miss Charlotte Calderwood, Brooke County clerk of courts, today. And so said half a dozen or more taxicab drivers (Cupids to you) and ministers (marrying parsons to West Virginians).

In the first place marriage is a serious business in Wellsburg—in fact it might be said to be an industry. And a young couple on marriage bent certainly must keep their wits about them so they are sure to give the "right answer."

Newport Thronged for Yacht Race Start

British Take Another Try to Recover America's Cup

By CORNELIUS VANDERBILT, Jr.

(Copyright, 1934, International News Serv.)

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 15.—"May the best boat win."

In code letters these signals fly at the cross beams of the Endeavour and the Rainbow today. They are echoed from the throats of thousands of spectators, as the greatest marine pageant on earth wends its way out of Newport Harbor to the starting line.

The million dollar fleet is swarming out through the narrows. Big yachts and little yachts, steam yachts and sailing yachts. Long Island commuters and New England coastal excursionists, the President of the United States aboard Vincent Astor's globe-encircling floating palace Nourmahal and Jane Doe on the chug chug Minnie Mouse from Mattapoisette down in Buzzards' Bay.

Ahead of them all towed by their faithful tenders ride the two graceful swans that will be the cynosure of all eyes—the British yacht Endeavour, the American Rainbow in the international cup races.

The odds are even, among the yachtsmen here, although there is some money to be picked up on Rainbow; and if it blows hard on Endeavour too.

At 9 o'clock this morning the New York Yacht Club landing was a blaze of color. Yachtsmen in their natty coats and caps hovered about with lovely ladies outfitted in the latest modes afloat.

Strains of "God Save the King" and "The Star Spangled Banner" were wafted across the harbor from early dawn.

A great spirit of international comraderie seems to prevail. Several representatives of foreign nations are in Newport unofficially for today's and the other races.

Roosevelt Among Ritzy and Rabble At Spectacle

Flags of many nations fly from mastheads afloat. The shore is lined with an uninterrupted ribbon of automobiles as far as the eye can reach.

Rounding Fort Adams yesterday, Rainbow tacked and crossed Endeavour's stern, a stone's throw away. Sopwith's amateurs were busy trying out a new light weather mainsail. Both crews stopptd a minute to eye one another. Then there arose three cheers from each yacht, and some one shouted out:

"May the best boat win."

It is in this spirit today then that the first race will be run and won. The only cloud on the horizon is old man weather himself, and nobody can tell what he might do.

FRENCH ARMS FIRM ACCUSED OF FINANCING HITLER

DU PONTS LIST POLITICAL DONATIONS

Divided Contributions Between Parties, Says Irenee

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—A list of their political campaign contributions since 1919 was drawn up by the powder-manufacturing du Ponts today for the Senate munitions committee.

The borthers—Lammot, Pierre and Irenee—and their cousin, Felix, were asked by Chairman Nye to submit a statement of contributions both by themselves and by the 35 members of the board of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Corporation.

The in estigators are in recess until Monday when they will question F. H. Love, of United Aircraft and Transport Corporation New York, and Donald Y. Brown of the Pratt and Whitney Corporation, Hartford.

AIRCRAFT PROBE PUSHED

From them they expect to learn further details of the activities of American aviation companies in selling to foreign nations battle aircraft and engines.

Committee investigators went over the evidence today, preparatory to learning as much as possible about the companies before formally questioning the witnesses.

What Nye expects to learn from the report of political contributions was not developed, but Irenee du Pont, vice president of the corporation, testified he had given to both parties.

Nye arranged to give his reaction today over the radio to disclosures thus far made by his committee.

When the du Ponts left the witness stand yesterday to be recalled in two months for further questioning, an incompleted picture had been presented of their international explosives business.

SPY IN DU PONT PAY

Testimony was received of employment by their company of an international spy, of their implied anticipation of a modification of the Versailles treaty that would permit them to sell war materials to Germany and of how they blocked an Argentine government attempt to build a powder plant of its own.

Application of a committee censorship on some phases of the hearing and a charge by one member that French munitions makers financed the German dictator, Hitler, so as to create a war atmosphere that would permit them to sell more of their wares were other developments.

The du Ponts finished a two-day appearance apparently more concerned about getting to a meeting of their board of directors on Monday than by developments at the inquiry.

TUB DEATH QUIZ FOR GROCER

from the windows of Mrs. Klee's apartment. I went up to investigate. After opening the door with a key, I found Mrs. Klee in the bathtub and the hot water tap of the shower turned on full. I turned off the water and called to the elevator man to summon a doctor.'

Pascarella, whose wife is visiting in Cleveland, told Detectives Frank K. Morgan and Dennis Timpona that he met Mrs. Klee a year ago when she lived in another apartment and shopped at his store.

Pascarella told the detectives he visited Mrs. Klee Thursday night and remained there until 2 a. m. yesterday. Returning at 11 a. m. he found her in bed. Mrs. Klee complained of illness and Pascarella prepared coffee and sandwiches for her and left at 1:15 p. m., according to Detectives Morgan and Timpona. On his visit Thursday night they sipped highballs, he told detectives.

Last night, en route to an East Liberty restaurant for dinner, he saw steam issuing from Mrs. Klee's apartment windows and went up to investigate.

LETTER FROM 'MAC'

Among the effects found in the apartment was a letter, postmarked Steubenville, which read in part:

"I am scarcely away, but I promised to write to you. I am thinking every hour of you and hoping you are O. K. I haven't a thing to write about excepting that you are the dearest thing on earth to me and two kids are all I have. I don't want them only when they are sleeping. Love, Mac."

It was dated August 16, 1934. There were other letters from "Mac" found in a small box.

HINTS 'MISTAKE'

Col. Calvin Goddard, internationally known ballistics expert and criminologist and instructor at Northwestern University, was visiting Coroner W. J. McGregor at the morgue when the body of Mrs. Klee was brought in for an autopsy. After viewing the body he said he was of the opinion that the woman intended to turn on the cold water tap, but in mistake had turned the hot water on.

A microscopic examination of Mrs. Klee's fingernails revealed a very small fragment of skin under one of the nails, Col. Goddard said. He declined to say if he believed that the skin was scratched from another person.

ZITA AROUSES WAR FEARS

VIENNA, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Reports from Brussels that the former Empress Zita intends to establish her home in Austria aroused apprehensions in many quarters today.

It was feared by many political observers that if her coming is a prelude to re-establishment of the Hapsburg monarchy, Austria, Hungary and the nations of the Little Entente will be confronted with new problems which will lead to more bloodshed.

Foreign ministers of the Little Entente have frequently made the statement that an attempt to restore the Hapsburg dynasty to Austria would throw middle Europe and possibly the entire continent into war.

It was stated also that Poland probably would take a decided stand against a Hapsburg restoration. Poland is among the nations which inherited vast territories from the old Austro-Hungarian monarchy.

WEIRTON LABOR PLEA ARGUED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—The dispute between the Wheeling corporation and the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers was the subject of another hearing today before the National Steel Labor Relations Board.

The board called a session to listen to arguments by Charlton Ogburn, counsel for the union, for an immediate decision on his organization's request for an election of employe representatives for collective bargaining at the company's Portsmouth, O. plant.

The Amalgamated has charged the company with denying collective bargaining under the National Recovery Act and with "locking out" union employes at Portsmouth by closing the plant there.

Parade Opens Dormont Anniversary Celebration

Enthusiastic Crowd Cheers Two-Mile Procession

Dormont turned out last night to show its full stature of manhood in a striking parade which opened its twenty-fifth anniversary celebration as one of Pittsburgh's most progressive boroughs.

For more than two hours the gay procession of floats, military organizations and volunteer fire departments marched through the business district down West Liberty avenue, while thousands lined the streets and thronged about the reviewing stand at Dormont High School.

The parade stretched out for more than two miles, with 46 floats, more than 200 automobiles and various platoons of marching groups.

The anniversary celebration continues today with a varied program of contests and exhibitions.

Leading the parade were David M. Barker, Dormont pioneer, as grand marshal, and his small granddaughter, Virginia, dressed in a white satin cape and silver crown as queen of the celebration.

The tiny queen, in an automobile, was received with acclaim by the sidewalk crowds. Following "her highness" were automobiles bearing groups of Dormont "old-timers," who took places of honor on the reviewing stand.

One of the features of the parade was "A" battery of the 176th Field Artillery, with tractors and field pieces.

Prize winners in the parade were the Mt. Lebanon Firemen's Band, the Brentwood Fire Department, for neatest appearance; the Mt. Oliver Fire Department, for having the most men in line; the Claysville Fire Department, for traveling the longest distance.

Parade judges were Charles Thomas, Edmund Ginniff and H. L. Parlette, Jr.

Weather Conditions

Rain has fallen over most of the states east of the Rocky Mountains since yesterday morning, and weather continues mostly cloudy over the central valleys and lake region this morning with showers continuing in the central valleys and lake region. Southern Wisconsin (Madison), 29.78 inches. High pressure overlies the western plains and entral Rocky Mountains, with fair weather and mostly clear skies over these regions. It is much cooler in the plains this morning, with temperatures below freezing in North Dakota and portions of South Dakota, Nebraska and Wyoming. The lowest temperature was 24 degrees, at Williston, N. D.

River Conditions

The rivers are about stationary. Stage at Franklin is 5-10ths foot below zero. Lock No. 7 Dam, 10.0; Pittsburgh, 10.2; Dam No. 4, 8.9; No. 8, 9.3; No. 10, 8.4, and No. 12, 8.9. The dams are up. The rivers will change but little.

RUM TAX DEAL CHARGED TO SCHNADER

Jobless Relief Doomed By Secret Pact, Lawrence Says

HARRISBURG, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—David L. Lawrence, Democratic state chairman, said last night in a campaign speech that former United States Senator Joseph Grundy and Attorney General William A. Schnader "schemed" to avoid levying taxes for unemployment relief in 1933 by "dooming" liquor stores profits before the system was created.

Referring to a "secret contract" which he said was drawn by Schnader, Republican nominee for Governor, "10 months ago and buried even before the signatures were dry," Lawrence said the document, "once revealed," would sustain:

"That the attorney general deceived the people of Pennsylvania as to the amount of tax that could be collected on liquor on hand when repeal became effective when he told the Legislature that $24,000,000 could be collected in levying a $2 a gallon floor tax.

SAYS PRICES HIGH

That without proper authority and without public knowledge he committed the Liquor Control Board even before it started to function to the purchase of 6,500,000 gallons of liquor at an approximate cost of $40,000,000 from the 'big three' distilleries.

"That the prices which Mr. Schnader agreed to pay were tremendously higher than the prevailing market because they included the $2 a gallon floor tax.

"That the result of this transaction was to make the public pay the floor tax instead of the distillers and that the price of liquor was thereby raised to such a high level that bootleggers today enjoy 75 per cent of the liquor traffic in Pennsylvania by public admission of the Liquor Control Board.

"That the Schnader deal in committing the Liquor Control Board to the purchase of $40,000,000 of liquor at exorbitantly high prices resulted in precluding purchases from independent distillers at reasonable prices and also gave certain distillers a virtual monopoly in the liquor stores system."

HURLS CHALLENGER

Lawrence in his broadcast speech declared "never before in the history of Pennsylvania has an Attorney General so flagrantly violated his office of trust through incompetence and desire for personal political gain."

He "challenged" Schnader to make public his "contract" with the distillers.

MRS. PINCHOT'S PLANS IN DARK

HARRISBURG, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, the Governor's wife, has political Pennsylvania guessing again.

Predicting she will be a candidate against Senator James J. Davis for his seat in the United States Senate in 1938, Republican and Democratic leaders today looked for her to withdraw as an independent candidate for Governor.

She has until Monday midnight to quit the campaign.

Last night the state's first lady made a speech to a group of garment workers in Harrisburg. She talked politics, but she said nothing about her aspirations.

She merely referred to the petitions filed in her behalf a week ago, listing her as the Independent party's candidate to succeed her husband in January.

G. O. P. TRAINS GUNS ON FOES AT RALLY

Launch 'Hardest Fight' On Spot Made Historic By Quay, Penrose

FOGELSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Pennsylvania Republicans holding their annual rally in historic Fogelsville Grove, a party shrine, today opened a mid-campaign assault on the national policies and state ticket of the Democratic party.

Under the same trees where Mathew Stanley Quay and Boies Penrose opened many another campaign, M. Harvey Taylor, new state chairman, told a throng of farmers and townfolk, "the very existence of the state is at stake" in the campaign, but he predicted a sweeping victory in November.

United States Senator David A. Reed, seeking re-election, renewed his attack on the "New Deal" where Charley Curtis opened the campaign for re-election of Herbert Hoover in 1932.

Attorney General William A. Schnader, nominee for Governor, pleaded for the preservation of state's rights and a return to constitutional government where Stone, Brumbaugh and Sproul started their successful campaigns for the governorship.

QUAY STARTED IT

Though the campaign has been in progress for many weeks, with candidates stumping the entire state with issues definitely set, to the rural folk of this quiet community eight miles from Allentown, the campaign actually starts today.

It has been thus since the reign of Quay, who chose to open his campaigns among the rural Pennsylvania Germans rather than the solidly organized metropolitan centers.

Every year since, "the opening gun has been fired" among the trees of Fogelsville.

The Republican State Committee, its new leadership undergoing its first major test, announced delegations arriving from all sections of the state.

PLEAD FOR HARMONY

Party generals, campaign managers, candidates and voters mingled to hear their high command plead for harmony, with the promise of victory against the Democrats, who are making their "most determined threat in 40 years."

Conversation touched every phase of the campaign before the actual program got under way.

The special session of the Legislature in Harrisburg, where a coalition of "Regular" Republicans and administration legislators are fighting Democrats to enact Gov. Pinchot's $20,000,000 unemployment relief program was discussed.

The Democratic administration in Washington and Democratic state candidates were blamed for the special session.

MARGIOTTI ASSAILED

Charles J. Margiotti, Pittsburgh and Punxsutawney lawyer, unsuccessful candidate for Governor in the May primary, also was a target. Margiotti recently bolted to support of the Democratic ticket.

The speechmaking, which tops a day of picnicking, is scheduled for mid-afternoon.

Chairman Taylor lauded the platform adopted by the state committee at Pittsburgh a week ago.

With "the very existence of the state of Pennsylvania at stake" in the campaign, Taylor said, the issue has been a factor in uniting the party "as never before."

Taylor is the nominee for secretary of internal affairs.

Senator Reed, speaking at meetings at Easton, Lehigh Township and Pen Argyl yesterday, assailed the NRA as "tyranny" and added:

"I believe we are being fed poison under the guise of the New Deal."

Cigar Code Hearing May Cut 'Two-Fers'

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—The NRA cigar code authority would reduce the size of the "two-for-a-nickel" cigar than its price.

A public hearing is planned by the authority for September 28, at which its propasals for a maximum size and minimum price, with retention of the present retail price, will be discussed.

Twins Named For City's Rivers

MRS. ALLEGHENY STILLWAGON

Sickness has parted for the first time Allegheny and Monongahela—two of the city's oldest twins.

Born 87 years ago in the Monongahela House, which was then a favorite stopping place for travelers, and named for the two Pittsburgh rivers, the twins have been constant companions until recently.

Mrs. Allegheny Stillwagon lives with her niece on the North Side, while her sister, Mrs. Monongahela Cover, is seriously ill in the State Hospital at Torrance, Pa.

Neither of the twins, it seems, liked her first name. Mrs. Stillwagon took the name of Madge, while her twin sister prefers to be known as Henrietta.

"Aunt Madge," as everybody calls her, said at the home of Mrs. Kate Lydey, of 1726 McCullough street, today:

"I worry all the time about my sister. I would like to go to see her in the hospital, but I have no way of getting there and I haven't any money."

Alderman George A. Young has continued the city's action against Alois Aschmann, of 5705-5707 Darlington road, charged with violating the city's zoning ordinance.

Following preliminary testimony yesterday, the Alderman continued the case to permit the City Bureau of Building Inspection to make a survey of the Aschmann property.

George E. Evans, superintendent of the bureau, brought the suit against Aschmann to force him to abide by a ruling of the Board of Adjustment refusing him a permit to retain two rooms he is alleged to have built on the upper story of his house.

Evans previously had "deferred" legal action against Aschmann, a former butler for a relative of Deputy Mayor Leslie M. Johnston, when Johnston suggested that a compromise might be arranged, Evans said.

GREEN ASSAILS JOHNSON IN STRIKE FEUD

NRA Chief Denounced For Blast at Labor In Walkout

sion must bear a major share of the responsibility for the present strike."

Woll Denounces Johnson For Attack on Labor

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Hugh S. Johnson's charge that organized labor, in calling a strike of textile workers, had broken its word to him, drew answering fire today from Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor.

Said Johnson in a Carnegie Hall address last night to various code authorities:

"The present strike is an absolute violation of an understanding between Thomas F. McMahon (president of the United Textile Workers) and myself."

Said Woll:

"Johnson, by his unwarrantable utterances and prejudiced intrustion into the textile situation, has made for greater difficulties in composing existing differences."

Johnson said that this, his first experience with organized labor in the textile industry, "was not encouraging." He added:

"If such agreements of organized labor are worth no more than this, then that institution is not such a responsible instrumentality as can make contracts on which this country can rely."

WOLL STRIKES BACK

Woll, who was among those who heard Johnson speak, said in a statement issued after the meeting:

"Representing the President as he (Johnson) does, it ill becomes him as administrator of NRA to manifest his personal feelings and prejudices against labor and in a matter of such vital public interest and grave public concern.

"Despite Johnson's attack on organized labor, the labor movement will go on. I am confident that textile workers can and will answer Johnson."

Johnson, in his address, said his "heart weeps" for George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute and spokesman for the mill owners in the present labor dispute.

Sloan, Johnson went on, "got concesions for labor which were opposed by practically the whole industry. It is a pity that he now has to take the rap in the dissension between labor and management of the whole proposition."

Shortly before Johnson spoke George A. Sloan issued a statement in which he said that "the vast majority of the workers in the cotton textile industry have no dispute with their employers." He called attention—as did Johnson later—to an increase of 140,000 in the number of workers in the industry under the first 12 months of its operation under the code.

Bomb Rocks Mill Town In Textile Strike

BURLINGTON, N. C., Sept. 15.—(AP.)—A dynamite bomb directed at the E. M. Holt plaid mills, scene of yesterday's rioting, shook Burlington today.

Riding in an automobile, several persons drove past the plant and threw the bomb into the mill yard.

The explosion was terrific, the concussion felt for blocks, but little damage was done. Windows in the mill were shattered along a 50-foot front, but the machinery was untouched.

Residents described the blast as "like an earthquake."

The Holt plant was the scene of rioting yesterday when National Guardsmen used bayonets and tear gas to clear away a large crowd of pickets. Five strikers received slight bayonet wounds.

RENT PLAN AIDS 1,400 FAMILIES

Assured that the state was ready to spend $250,000 monthly for relief of landlords in Allegheny County, real estate dealers have pledged co-operation with the County Relief Board in forestalling the eviction this month of more than 1,400 families on relief.

The assurance was given by Dr. W. C. Harris, of the State Relief Board, at a meeting in the bar association rooms in the City-County Building. The funds will be available, he said, under a plan adopted recently, whereby the county board will furnish one and one-half times the current tax expense for homes occupied by relief tenants. More than 75 dealers attended the meeting.

The plan is to be discussed tomorrow night at a meeting sponsored by the Hill District Taxpayers' Association in the Irene Kaufmann Settlement, Center avenue, William Lando, president, said.

WRITING EXPERTS TO BE CALLED IN SWISSVALE SLAYING

CUMMINGS' PENMANSHIP STUDIED

Death Case Probers Find Apparent Similarities

Some time before Thomas Cummings, former Swissvale police chief, is prosecuted for the alleged murder of his wife, a handwriting expert will examine threatening letters addressed to Cummings and to Dr. George W. Seitz, Assistant District Attorney John F. Haggerty said today.

And the handwriting expert will also compare pencil lettering and script of Cummings, Haggerty said.

Dr. Seitz, crusading councilman of Swissvale, believes they're similar handwriting and lettering, the prosecutor said. Haggerty added:

"Neither of us is an expert. But I, too, believe, they're all very similar."

BLAMES OUTSIDER

Cummings was in a cell in the county jail today, charged with the murder of Julia Cummings, his 30-year-old wife, found in her bed Tuesday morning with a bullet in her head.

Cummings maintains, Haggerty said, that an outsider must have fired the fatal shot through the window. He submitted the letters to indicate the threats.

County Detectives John Carmichael, Albert Shedlock and Samuel Riddle have worked on the theory that someone in the room of the Cummings apartment, 2201 Hawthorne street, Swissvale, killed Mrs. Cummings.

They turned the former police chief over to Coroner W. J. McGregor yesterday and the murder charge was lodged against him. The inquest will follow further checking by Carmichael, it was understood. The detectives plan to pursue several lines of investigation, they said.

REMAINS IN CELL

Cummings remained, quiet and friendless, in his cell. As yet no attorney had pleaded his cause; no friend offered bond. He was taken to the bier of his wife yesterday, but showed no emotion. He had not asked to be taken. He only inquired about his child.

Haggerty and the detectives then took him to the bedroom where his wife was found dead. There he protested his sorrow for her death, but gave the detectives little information.

Haggerty yesterday made public the threat letters.

In old envelopes one was addressed to Thomas Cummings, Woodstock avenue, Swissvale, and the other, address illegible and stamped "cannot be located.".

THREATENING LETTERS

One, dated July 3, read:

"Just to let you know you are still in line to go with the race horse man."

(Signed in print) "R."

This was stamped in East Liberty. Dr. Seitz was reported to be the "race horse man," detectives believed.

The other, dated April 1, read:

"Dear Friend:

"Now that you are no longer chief we can get you for sending our boy away. We suffer, so can you."

This was dated from East Liberty.

the most important of which is that they are "over twenty-one."

There are fees to be considered—and questions to be answered.

Wellsburg's committee of greeters, seven taxicab drivers, all have that cherubic look about them. Day and night they stand ready to lend a helping hand. They know all "the answers" and all the ministers. And if the Courthouse is closed they know the way to the nearest license clerk.

'CUPID' EXPLAINS

They know better than to take anybody with too much liet or lig to Miss Calderwood, though. Ned Davidson, a regular among the "cupids," had this to say:

"We do not marry couples who are intoxicated and never have. The clerk who issues the licenses is one of the finest moral and upright women you would find anywhere.

"Anyone who makes such a statement lies to cover up some deeper mistake in his marriage. There are some couples who come to Wellsburg on the aftermath of a drunken party, but the taxicab driver will not accompany them to the clerk. He knows they will not secure a license. There are hundreds of such couples turned down every year."

But everybody knows that hundreds of other couples are married, no matter how childish they appear, if they only state they are "over twenty-one."

Of course, the "cupids" ask a fee. They expect it for services rendered and they throw in the transportation. The average is $2.

The license costs $2, but if the newlyweds want something to show for their trip, they must purchase a certificate—another $1.50 to $3.

Then, there is the minister. Wedding fees keep a couple of churches going in Wellsburg.

How much?

Well, now—that's up to the fumbling groom, or if the bride isn't blushing too much . . . anyway, five dollars shouldn't be too much!

So it can readily be seen that Wellsburg is no place for a drunk, man or woman. No sir, marriage is a serious business and Miss Calderwood takes her job too seriously. Says she:

"I've been in the marriage license office 12 years and I have never once issued a license to a couple if either one of them was visibly under the influence of liquor. How can I tell—that's easy. If they start acting silly and don't seem able to take care of themselves I simply tell them I won't give them a license."

Bullet Holes in Screen Branded Fakes by Test

Shots Fired in Probe At Swissvale Show Differences

A wire window screen, containing two holes carefully made in imitation of bullet holes, is one of the strong bits of evidence against Swissvale's former police chief, Thomas Cummings, county detectives said today.

JOHN HAGGERTY

Assistant Prosecutor Haggerty, inspecting the threatening notes in the Cummings case. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

The screen was found in the bedroom where Cummings' wife, Julia, 30, was found murdered early Tuesday morning.

County Detectives John Carmichael, Samuel Riddle and Albert Shedlock, and Swissvale Chief R. W. Stitt made a firing test, using another screen, to determine what kind of holes would be made by a bullet. These proved a bullet would leave ragged edges.

THOMAS CUMMINGS

In the screen they found the wire was not torn. Apparently a pencil or other pointed instrument had been screwed into the screen until it made a hole of about the size of a bullet, they said. One of the holes also showed what appeared to be powder burns, which detectives said might have been made by a burning match. They added:

"It was a very crude job."

The hole found in the cupboard in the bedroom where Mrs. Cummings was found shot is now believed to be part of "the plot," the investigators said.

One hole was made apparently for a bullet that went "wild," they said.

HITLER BLAMED BY LEWIS' WIFE

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(APP.)—Dorothy Thompson, the wife of Sinclair Lewis, who recently was invited to leave Germany, has arrived on the Leviathan, declaring:

"I know the expulsion order came from Hitler personally. The position of news in Germany is hopeless. Quite hopeless. And it is getting worse."

Returning to the expulsion order, she said:

"I interviewed Hitler in 1931. It is interesting for me that a man with such power could remember so long."

She said she was unruffled by the experience and would continue getting information about Germany, adding:

"After all, there are many ways of getting it without going there.—A number of ways."

She said she plans to join her husband in Vermont.

LUCKY 'CLERIC' GETS HIS $123

Braddock police today sought two men, one of whom was dressed as a clergyman, who obtained $123 from Sanders Boon, 25, owner of a restaurant at 1124 Washington street, Braddock, after promising to bring him "good luck."

The two showed Boon $123 when they entered the restaurant and said if he would get $123 they would exchange money to "bring them all good luck." The proposal sounded a little queer to Boon, he told police, but he produced the money.

His $123 was put into a handkerchief, the pseudo churchman said a few words and handed the handkerchief back to Boon. When he looked inside after the visitors departed he found a bundle of brown wrapping paper.

Plant Long Closed To Resume Monday

EXPERT STUDIES DEATH BULLET

Stopping off between trains last night, Col. Calvin Goddard, ballistics expert and criminologist and an instructor on the subjects at Northwestern University, visited Coroner W. J. McGregor, at the morgue, viewing the scalded body of a woman and making a microscopic examination of the death bullet in the murder of Mrs. Julia Cummings, wife of Thomas A. Cummings, ex-police chief of Swissvale. He is en route to Chicago from New York.

His former pupil, Chief Clerk James L. Davidson, related the facts in the case. After a microscopic view of the bullet, Col. Goddard said there remained enough of the scars of a gun barrel to link an individual revolver. The revolver in the case, held by county detectives, was not seen by Col. Goddard.

Bullets usually perforate and do not shatter glass, forcing particles of glass inside if the bullet is fired from the outside, he said. Mrs. Cummings' husband, Thomas A. Cummings, formally charged with her murder, told detectives the window in his home was broken by someone firing from the outside. Detectives reported finding broken glass outside of the house.

NUMBERS CASE CAUSES BRAWL IN COURT

Police Inspector Tries To Hurl Lawyer Into Cell

Attorney O. H. Friedman's declaration that "20,000 persons are engaged in the numbers racket in this district" and efforts of Police Inspector John Vincent to throw Friedman into a cell, marked a hearing of five defendants arrested on lottery charges, before Magistrate Anthony Lucas in Central Police Court today.

Friedman clashed frequently with Magistrate Lucas during the hearing, which caused Lucas to remark:

"Don't you know that District Attorney Park and Judge McNaugher are bending efforts to squelch the numbers rackets?"

Friedman replied:

"And do you know there are 25,000 persons engaged in this numbers business?"

Inspector Vincent asked the magistrate to hold the defendants for court.

The magistrate obliged, which brought the following from Friedman:

"I would not be scared of police if I were you. I may be up there myself some day."

Vincent did not like the insinuation from Friedman that gonlice were able to bully the magistrate. He ordered the attorney oout of the courtroom, saying:

"Go on now, the case is over. Go on or I'll put you in."

Friedman invited:

"Go ahead and put me in."

Vincent grabbed the attorney and was hustling him back to the cell room when Lucas said:

"Now, now, Inspector, he's just a little hot-headed. I wouldn't do anything like that."

Vincent released the attorney, but remarked he thought Friedman was being "too fresh."

Lucas agreed on the freshness but Friedman was permitted to leave.

The defendants held for court on charges of operating a lottery were Harry Pitler, 70 Roberts street; Leonard Rofey, 1927 Forbes street; Abe Levey, 1920 Plainview avenue; Jesse Levey, same address, and Edward Harris, Negro, of 1824 Colwell street.

Calls Sun-Telegraph Pictures Paper's Best Feature

Winners of cash prizes totaling $100 in the first week's contest for the best letters answering the question, "What Feature Do I Like Best in the Daily Sun-Telegraph—and Why?" are announced today.

His nomination of pictures illustrating news stories as the Sun-Telegraph's chief feature wins T. D. Malone, Jr., of 3133 Jean street, Pittsburgh, first prize of $50.

Second prize of $20 goes to Mrs. W. K. Girty, of 28 Elm street, Etna, for her choice of Elsie Robinson's column, "Listen World."

Entries for the second week's contest close tonight at midnight and prize winners will be announced next Saturday. Letters must not be longer than 25 words, but you may submit as many letters as you wish.

The Sun-Telegraph wants your own honest opinion expressed in your own way—in your own words. Put your real reasons in your letters, not what you think somebody else wants you to say.

Judges for the first week's contest were Prof. William S. Maulsby, head of the Department of Journalism, University of Pittsburgh; Judge Ralph E. Smith of Common Pleas Court, and Mrs. R. B. Perry, corresponding secretary, Federation of Pennsylvania Women, and nominee for the district presidency of the federation.

The complete list of prize winners:

FIRST PRIZE, $50

T. D. Malone, Jr., 3133 Jean street, Pittsburgh:

"Pictures accompanying news items give the reader a clearer conception and make the item more interesting. This is the main feature of the Sun-Telegraph."

SECOND PRIZE, $20

Mrs. W. K. Girty, 28 Elm street, Etna, Pa.:

"Elsie Robinson's article appeals to me, because it not only refreshes the mind but also the soul. Her article gives you the strength to start anew."

FOUR $5 PRIZE WINNERS

John L. Shields, box 345, Brookville, Pa.:

"Reading McIntyre's column is to me like meeting a well-beloved friend who, upon each meeting, has something clean, interesting and entertaining to recount."

J. E. Chaney, 477 East Beau street, Washington, Pa.:

"Walter Winchell tops 'em all. Inimitable style; items that are really new—plus the personal touch that appeals. Makes you feel like a 'big shot.'"

Mrs. Josephine Weslie, 1320 Termon avenue, North Side:

"'The Human Side of the News' is my favorite. It presents interesting information in an original attention-compelling manner. Continued reading provides an invaluable cosmopolitan knowledge."

Bryant F. Colbank, Point Marion, Pa.:

"'Today' epitomizes the thoughts of a soberly intelligent man and solidifies the disjointed sentiments of millions of people. Thinking, he makes others think—and heed."

cle himself. It says the President hasn't succeeded in his "four fundamental objects, but it is too soon to conclude that experiments he is undertaking are not successful."

Perhaps the President will write something about Mussolini and his "fundamental objects."

This country has only one big "fundamental," namely, restoration of prosperity, in a country flat on its back with many troubles in its insides.

MUSSOLINI'S undertakings are a success, at least as regards maintenance of power and improvement in conditions. He realizes that to exercise force you must use force, whether it be castor oil or bullets.

The strike situation in America, and unexpected violence accompanying it, prove that the problem is not so much putting idle men to work as it is keeping employed men satisfied.

It is much easier to start something than it is to stop it, or control it.

HOW MUCH difference one word can make. Mr. Arthur ("Bugs") Baer, remembering "even the worthy Homer sometimes nods" makes Hamlet say.

"For this relief, many thanks."

Shakespeare made Hamlet say:

"For this relief much thanks 'tis bitter cold, And I am sick at heart."

"Much thanks" is a high-stepping expression, whereas "many thanks" is strictly colloquial and "terre a terre."

Similarly, when you write "We are such stuff as dreams are made on, and our little life is rounded with a sleep," you must write "follow copy" ahead of the quotation, to prevent its being printed "we are such things as dreams are made of."

"Dreams are made on" appeals to imagination, whereas "dreams are made of" seems commonplace. If you can explain that, you know something about the English language.

THE LITTLE DIONNE quintuplets are suffering from intestinal toxemia, which means poison in their little insides. Proposed blood transfusions have been postponed.

When infants have toxemia, it is because they have taken poison through the mouths into their stomachs.

The quintuplets live on human milk, but it comes from hospitals and there is always a chance of infection.

DATES CHOSEN FOR AUTUMN CONFERENCES

The executive committee of the Pittsburgh Synod of the United Lutheran Church in America will hold its organization meeting at 10 a. m. Tuesday in the William Penn Hotel. This committee consists of the officers of the Synod, the Rev. Dr. Henry H. Bagger, Pittsburgh, president; the Rev. Frank W. Ash, secretary; the Rev. Dr. George H. Schnur, Erie, secretary of statistics; the Rev. Dr. William A. Logan, Turtle Creek, secretary of beneficence; the Rev. Dr. Elmer F. Rice, Duquesne, treasurer; the Rev. Dr. John J. Myers, Pittsburgh, missionary superintendent, and the presidents and lay representatives of the seven conferences: Erie, William E. Eisenberg, Greenville, and Raymond C. Leemhuis, Esq., Erie; Northeast, Charles A. Dennig, Warren, and Mr. C. C. Goodman, Dubois; East, the Rev. Dr. George N. Lauffer, Kittanning, and W. C. Chapman, Esq., Indiana; West, J. Fred Bermon, New Brighton, and Dr. Charles E. Miller, Butler; Central, the Rev. David E. Maxwell, and A. M. Hartzell, Pittsburgh; Greensburg, Dr. William H. Hetrick, Connellsville, and H. E. Cope, Esq., Greensburg, and German, Dr. Theodore Buch, Johnstown, and Reinhold Jeske, Johnstown.

Dr. Bagger

The committee announced dates for the fall conference sessions as follows: Prospect, September 24-25; Sagamore, September 26; St. Petersburg, September 27; Pittsburgh, October 1-2; Farrell, October 2-3; Erie, October 3-4; Scottdale, October 8.

SUNDAY SCHOOL TO MEET HERE

Prof. O. W. Warmington, of Boston, will speak at the general sessions of the forty-fifth annual convention of the Allegheny County Sabbath School Association in Trinity Cathedral, Sixth avenue, at 2:45 p. m. on Sunday, September 23.

Worship services will be conducted by R. Stanley Kendig, of Philadelphia, assisted by Prof. Albert Hamer, organist at Trinity and the chorus choirs of the county Christian Endeavor, Pittsburgh Young People's Christian Union and the Schola Cantorum.

Miss Ione Sikes, of Philadelphia, and others will conduct conferences for children's division workers. Leaders and members of young people's division and pastors and superintendents will attend other conferences.

From 1,000 to 1,200 people are expected to attend the convention of which F. S. Cousley is president and Dr. J. Kirkwood Craig, general secretary.

CHURCH TALK IN THEATER

"Substance" will be the subject of the lesson sermon to be read in all Christian Science churches tomorrow. The golden-text will be: "My God Shall Supply All Your Need According to His Riches in Glory by Christ Jesus."

Services will be held at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. tomorrow in the First Christian Science Church, Clyde street; in the Third Christian Science, West Liberty avenue; and in the First Christian Science, Wallace avenue, Wilkinsburg. At 11 a. m. services will be held in the Second Christian Science, Ridge avenue, and in the First Christian Science, Lincoln avenue, Bellevue.

There will be a free lecture on Christian Science, "Christian Science: God's Law of Freedom and Dominion," at 3:15 p. m. tomorrow in Stanley Theater. William Duncan Kilpatrick, of Detroit, Mich., member of the board of lectureship of the mother church, will speak.

Chamber Opposes Transfer of Funds

Earnings of the state forestry division, as well as the divisions of water power and recreation, should be retained for the upkeep of their undertakings, in the opinion of the Chamber of Commerce.

Adopting a recommendation of its forestry committee, the chamber voted that wherever any state department is earning money, such funds should first be applied to the development and care of that particular department.

Miss Street Named Valley Hospital Head

Miss Clara L. Street, assistant superintendent of the Valley Hospital, at Sewickley, today had been named superintendent to succeed Miss W. Maud Newman, who retired due to ill health after 18 years as head of the institution. Miss Newman organized the Nurses' Training School at the hospital and was president of that organization. She has gone to the home of a brother in New Jersey.

Author to Aid In Church Campaign

THE REV. DR. COOPER

The Rev. Dr. Raymond W. Cooper, of Andover, Mass., nationally known author, lecturer and preacher, will assist the Rev. William R. Fankey in a campaign of visitation evangelism at the Union Baptist Church, Brownsville road, beginning tomorrow and lasting for two weeks with services nightly at 7:30. Miss Helen Glasser will direct musical programs at each service.

CHURCH TO FETE TWO EVENTS

St. Luke's Evangelical Lutheran Church, West View, celebrates home-coming day tomorrow in anticipation of an active resumption of Sunday worship after summer vacation.

Mr. Spoehr

Two events will be significantly remembered tomorrow, the sixth anniversary of the consecration of the present church building and the twenty-seventh anniversary of the organization of the congregation.

Full Junior and Senior choirs will sing "Te Deum Laudamus in B-Flat," by Stanford, under the direction of J. Julius Baird, organist, who will play the prelude "Laudate Dominum," by Shelden, and the postlude, "Ein Feste Burg," by M. Luther. Charles Thoke, tenor, will sing Vandewater's "The Penitent" as the offeratory solo.

The Rev. Luther P. Spoehr will speak on "The Day Better Than a Thousand" and the congregation will be requested to contribute coins minted in 1907, the year the church was organized.

Guest Teacher For Bible Class

Tomorrow morning at 9:30, the Emory Brotherhood Bible Class will have as guest teacher, Charles Brandon Booth, son of Gen. Ballington Booth, founder of the Volunteers of America. The orchestra will play under the direction of J. Ray Nicodemus.

CHURCH MARKS ANNIVERSARY TOMORROW

An observance of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of Dormont will be held in the Dormont Methodist Episcopal Church, Potomac avenue, at 8 p. m. tomorrow. Burgess Charles Chamberlin and Chief of Police Ralph Miller will speak and the Rev. J. D. Piper will speak on "Christian Citizenship in Decent Dormont."

Chief Miller

Dr. Shelton to Give Anniversary Talk

The Rev. Dr. George W. Shelton will preach his twenty-fourth anniversary sermon as pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church at 7:45 p. m. tomorrow. His subject will be "Motto for the New Year."

Coming to Pittsburgh after a 10-year pastorate in the Russell Street Church, Nashville, Tenn., Dr. Shelton has traveled and preaching widely in the last two decades. Members of various Pittsburgh churches and former members of the Second Church now living in other cities will attend services tomorrow.

The Story of Abraham

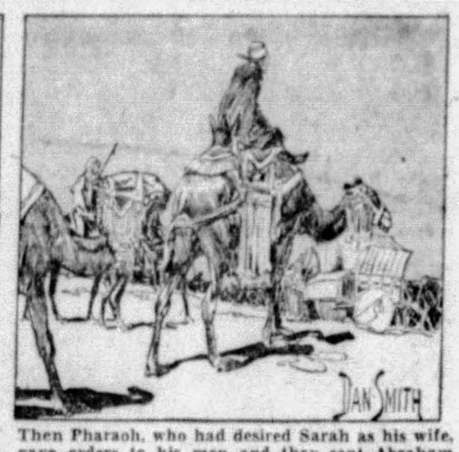
CHAPTER II

Told in Pictures By Dan Smith

When Abraham and his wife Sarah were sojourning in Egypt it came to pass, even as Abraham had foretold, that when the Egyptians and the princes of Egypt beheld the woman they saw that she was very fair, and they commended her before Pharaoh.

And so it befell that Sarah was taken into Pharaoh's house, and for her sake Pharaoh entreated Abraham well and gave him sheep, and oxen, and he asses, and menservants, and maidservants, and she asses, and camels, so that Abraham had plenty.

But because of Sarah, the Lord plagued Pharaoh and his house with great plagues, so that Pharaoh called Abraham and said, "What is this that thou hast done unto me? Why didst thou not tell me that she was thy wife? Now go thy way."



Then Pharaoh, who had desired Sarah as his wife, gave orders to his men and they sent Abraham away with Sarah and all that he had. And Abraham, who was now very rich in cattle, silver and gold, took Lot with him and returned to Bethel.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS -:- By PAUL MALLON

Wall Street Needs Fund to Build Wailing Wall

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—It was not modesty but prudence that kept Railroad Co-ordinator Eastman's report a secret.

Mr. Mallon

He went up to the President's hideout at Hyde Park a few days ago, submitted his recommendations and vanished. Neither he nor the Hyde Park announcers would talk.

Trustworthy little birds, who listened at the window of the conference room, report they got an earful. They say they heard Mr. Eastman recommend the creation of a Department of Transportation in the government, to be headed by an additional cabinet officer. The purpose would be to regulate highway and waterway competition with the railroads.

Birds with railroad investments thought that was a good idea until they found out that Mr. Eastman also had some notion that the government could take over ownership of railroad properties eventually and lease them for private operation—in other words, government ownership and private operation.

The news has been grapevined to inner congressional and railroad circles here. They are in a turmoil.

The best authorities are betting that the President will not follow Mr. Eastman's recommendations, either as to the new cabinet post or as to government ownership.

BACKGROUND

It is true that the official Bankers' Magazine characterized the new interest rates as "generous." It is also true that the Treasury never gets generous unless it has to.

The terms of the new financing are admittedly better for bondholders than the financing in April and June, and the reason is the Treasury did not want to take a chance on having the bond issue fail.

If you look at the New Deal deficit for this fiscal year (July, August and September up to the tenth), you will find it is $487,000,000. That indicates the deficit is accumulating at a rate of about $200,000,000 a month. If this rate is maintained, the deficit for this year would be around two and a half billions. It will run more than that because expenditures will be accelerated during the winter. But there is every reason to believe that the total deficit of this year and last will be less than the nine billions President Roosevelt promised in the last budget.

You may recall that he promised a deficit of seven billions the first year of the New Deal and two billions the second. The actual deficit for the first year was four billions (instead of seven), and this year it will be near four, instead of two.

The danger in the program is the prospect that he will not be able to balance the budget next year. That is a real live danger.

FUTURE

What makes the existing condition of the Treasury look fairly good, however, is the fact that it has $1,280,000,000 in its general balance fund (not counting the gold profit). It could run for six months on this balance.

Also, it has no more important financing to do up to December 15. There will be weekly note issues of $50,000,000. They will probably be refinanced in 182-day Treasury bills at not more than ¼ of 1 per cent. On December 15, $992,000,000 of certificates fall due for payment. Then there will be weekly issues of $75,000,000 December 19 to February 27.

For these reasons the Treasury insiders have marked the government bond flurry down as another temporary Wall street delusion. They may be kidding themselves, but they tell a plausible story.

DISMAY

What really dismayed the Wall streeters was the Maine election. They interpreted it as meaning they would get two more years of the New Deal and possibly six, and their spirits fell accordingly.

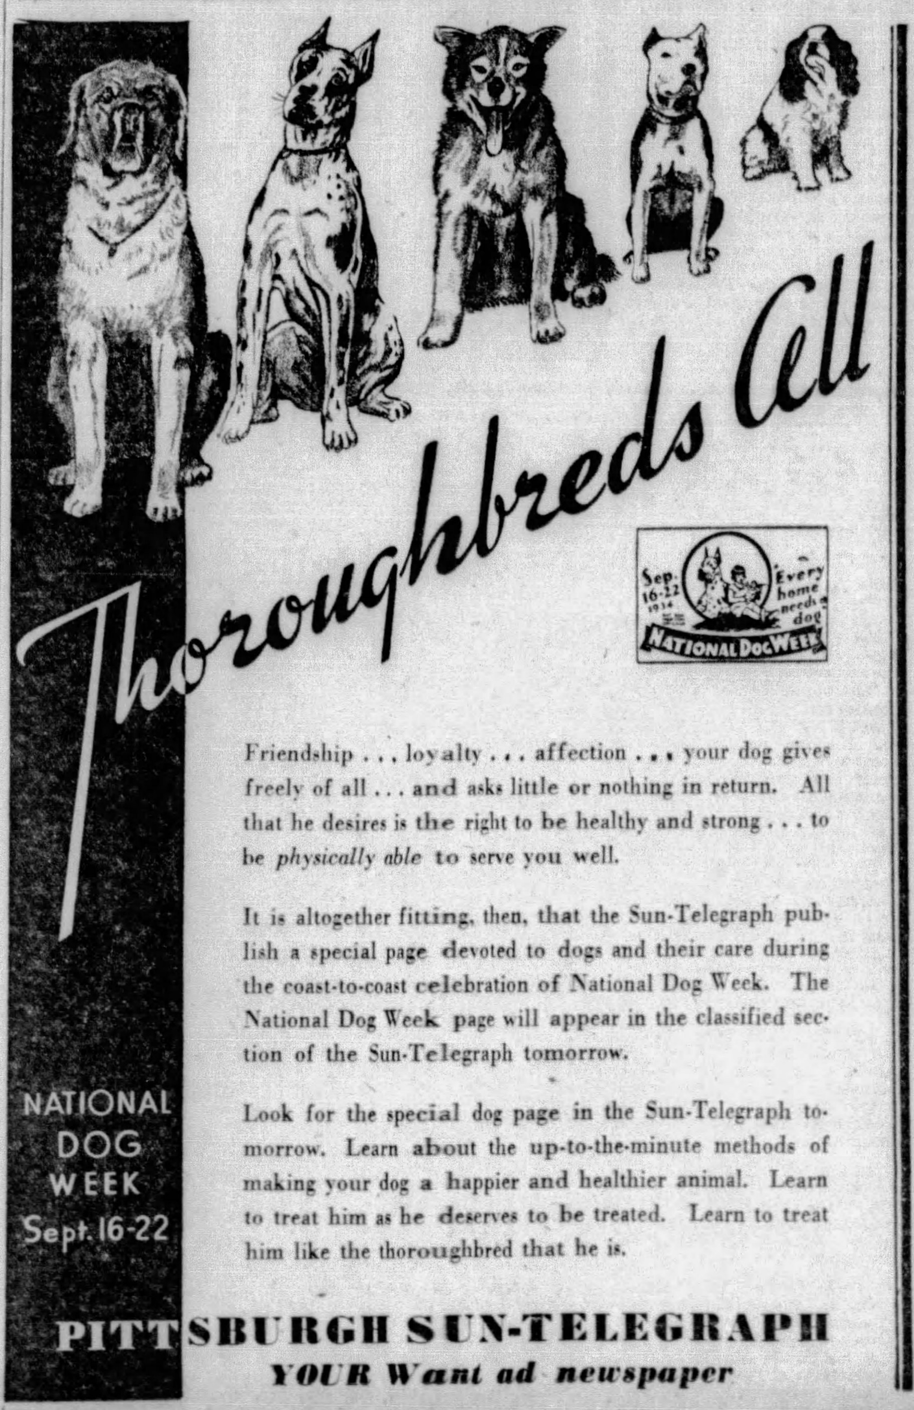
Market Delights In Rumors, Bad Or Good



Friendship . . . loyalty . . . affection . . . your dog gives freely of all . . . and asks little or nothing in return. All that he desires is the right to be healthy and strong . . . to be physically able to serve you well.

It is altogether fitting, then, that the Sun-Telegraph publish a special page devoted to dogs and their care during the coast-to-coast celebration of National Dog Week. The National Dog Week page will appear in the classified section of the Sun-Telegraph tomorrow.

Look for the special dog page in the Sun-Telegraph tomorrow. Learn about the up-to-the-minute methods of making your dog a happier and healthier animal. Learn to treat him as he deserves to be treated. Learn to treat him like the thoroughbred that he is.

TWO PREMIERS FOR RADIO FANS TONIGHT

New Shows For Dull Spots

Sorry, but you'll have to break that date with the Joneses! There is too much happening on the air tonight for you to go skidding about the town!

"The Gibson Family" opens at 9:30 on WCAE. After all the ballyhoo the show has had and after all the greenbacks the program has cost, the soap company sponsor is praying the series floats!

The Gibson Family is said to be the first original musical comedy ever written exclusively for radio. Courtney Ryley Cooper is writing the script and Arthur Schwartz and Howard Dietz are writing the music. Courtney Ryley Cooper is the man who lives in a fine big pent house way up high in New York and imported a "meadow" at great expense so his little dog could get out and romp in the grass.

Do you know Carolyne Gray? Did you ever hear her play the piano? Maybe that's more to the point! Carolyne is a local girl who made good in the big city. For two years Miss Gray's playing has been a feature of Columbia Broadcasting System sustaining and stand-by shots. Now she's coming home to Pittsburgh and you'll hear her featured from WCAE as staff pianist after October 1st.

Premier II. Roxy and his gang! Think of that! And on WJAS too, when Roxy used to be so like brothers and sisters over at Radio City. There have been some tough breaks for Mr. Rothapfel in the radio business, but it looks like tonight's show may make everything all right again. The Revue takes 45 minutes and begins at 8.

"Rhythm is the pulse of America" and it's Lopez speaking this time. If you've ever danced to Lopez music you know what is meant by rhythm. After a fling out in Hollywood, where Vincent Lopez is to make two pictures, one of which is the Ziegfield movie, he plans to come back East. When he goes on the air again in a big way the Lopez band will hitch its wagon to that fine white star "Simplicity," Mr. Lopez said today.

Isn't it nice having people like Lopez broadcasting locally right here in our home town. Makes us feel so cozy and exclusive like. KQV at 10, and WJAS at 11.

Just a reminder! That story called "The Death Cross" in the Front Page Drama series will be broadcast over WCAE at 7:45 tonight. The story is all about mountain feuds and a working girl who saved the day and gained a sweetheart. The air story is a dramatization of a short story which appears in tomorrow's American Weekly.

Monday is Constitution day you know (or did you) and the networks are crowded with salutes to the document under which we demand our rights and our liberty we maintain. Ogden Mills will speak at 4:30 Monday over KDKA and Bainbridge Colby addresses a convention of 30 leading patriotic societies in the Quaker City at 8:30. KDKA will carry.

There is a meeting of all the managers of all the local radio stations in the country down at Cincinnati beginning Monday. They have lots to say about what we will hear and what we can't hear and the bosses of all our stations are going to attend. Jack Stewart over at WCAE says there may be a chance we'll have the convention next year right here in our city, at least he's going to do his best for dear old Rugby.

Another chance to meet a radio act face to face is on the boards for the home folks. The Goldbergs in person and en famille are arriving at a local theater for a week's stay beginning Friday the 28th of today's month.

Globe Trotting

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Well, it's all settled! I am happy to announce that on Monday the Globe Trotters will hear from America's great character actor of the stage and screen, Chic Sale.

Listen for him on the 12:15 broadcast,

Not being able to appear today and still not wanting to disappoint the Globe Trotters who already were expecting him, he has consented to entertain us on Monday even though that is the same day he opens his theatrical engagement here.

Harry Brown, manager of the Nixon Theater, who made the arrangements for the Globe Trotters, will do the introductory honors.

Later in the season Mr. Brown will arrange appearances of other great stage names for the Globe Trotter audiences.

'Met' Show Sponsor Fades

By AIRCASTER

The Metropolitan Opera will be presented again this season over the National Broadcasting Company skeins, but due to one of those strange incidents, there will be no commercial angel on hand to patronize the series, as happened last year.

The story they tell along Radio Row is that a week ago it seemed fairly certain the cigaret company which bankrolled last season's Met series on the air, would sign again. In fact, they say the contract had been drawn up and the head man of the company was reaching for a fountain pen when his eyes suddenly focused on a national magazine, lying open before him. On one of the pages was a colored advertisement.

In this ad there was an attractive photograph of one of the Met's best looking divas, blithely smoking a cigaret, and beneath the picture a quotation in which the lass insisted that she never smoked any other kind. Well, the kind she was puffing was that made by the prospective sponsor's rival. Hurriedly the fountain pen of the executive was replaced. The contract was spurned, and that's how little things sometimes enlarge themselves.

Back in 1925, on October 4, one of radio's earliest sponsors, inaugurated the first series of guest programs on the then immature NBC network. The gentleman behind the idea which brought a topnotch orchestra with an operatic star every week, was, and still is a manufacturer of radio sets. He started a vogue, which remains the most successful procedure in broadcasting today—the introduction of a different and talented guest with each show. The series continued six years and ended in 1931. The orchestra employed was that of Joseph Pasternack.

On next Monday a week, at WJAS, at 8:30 p. m. this same sponsor, will, after a three-year absence from the radio scene, resume exactly where he left off, but it will be on the Columbia System this time. Joseph Pasternack will be back with his orchestra, and the operatic canaries will be recruited as of yore. The first of them will be Grace Moore. And it all goes to prove that radio tastes have not changed greatly in all that time.

MISS COLBERT MODELING A GOWN OF RASPBERRY CREPE

In Claudette Colbert's wardrobe is this crepe hostess gown. It is a tunic silhouette with a striking scarab motif at the throat and both wrists.

MISS GLENDA FARRELL: A CHARMING AND DAINTY PICTURE IN BLACK AND WHITE

Miss Farrell featuring a black-and-white outfit with a daintily ruffled collar. A sign of the extreme feminity that many of the new clothes are showing this season is seen in this little ruffled collar.

BLACK VELVET MODELED BY VERREE TEESDALE

Miss Teesdale in a long velvet gown with a band of gold cloth set on the decolletage and looping to a panelled train.

FALL OUTFIT OF VELVETEEN—AND BETTE DAVIS

Miss Davis in a fall street suit of brown and yellow striped wool and velveteen. Velveteen is fashion's darling.

PATRICIA ELLIS

Miss Ellis in a smart, new fall dress. This ensemble features brown and tan plaid trimmed with black krimmer.

JEAN MUIR WEARING A JAUNTY SPORTS HAT

Miss Muir has selected for these coming fall days this dashing little felt hat for sports wear. Notice the unusual cut.

MISS HELEN HAYES WEARING A BACKLESS GOWN OF ROYAL BLUE TIE SILK

Carrying on the vogue for tie silk, Miss Hayes displays this attractive gown fashioned with interesting small white figures. Tie silk, fashion dictates, is good.

BRIGHTLY-HUED STRIPED SILK WORN BY CHINESE ANNA MAY WONG

Miss Wong in an ideal informal hostess gown. This creation follows simple lines, and its color scheme suffices for imaginative trimming to suit the individual.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Memos of a Columnist's Girl Friday

Dear W.: Everybody in town, it seems, is breathless over the opening for a movie critic job . . . Mordaunt Hall's leaving the n. t. field, however, won't mean a successor will inherit the job right away . . . His post will be filled by the drama dep't, so I wrinsh your friends would quit phoning me all day . . . I see that Mr. Brisbane and you both hit on the same thought about demanding an investigation as to how some passengers "crashed" lifeboats . . . But you were only kidding in the column. Did you see that testimonny of Brulla? . . . He revealed that even the crew had to shmow their union cards before they could get into them.

Sorry to hear about Mr. Alciatore passing on in New Orleans. He was a nice man . . . Grace Hayes used to do an imitation of Mae West in her act. She dropped it for a time, and recently wrote Mae asking permission to revive it . . . May urged Grace not to do it—because her type of character was in such trouble right now, and it might jeopardize her movies, etc . . . Here's a hot one. A B'way press agent's latest client is a country! . . . Jay Faigen is handling publicity for Luxembourg, an independent Duchy near Germany . . . The natives are annoyed because other people think they are sympathetic to Hitler, and Jay's been hired to crush the canard.

Leon Belasco got into a fight with cab drivers and knocked them practically dead the other night near the St. Moritz Hotel . . . Marie L. Stillman's maw phoned. Said the report Marie was betrothed to W. Chrysler, Jr., was exaggerated, they merely are friends . . . The A. B. A. you mentioned was dissolved long ago . . . The A. F. A., a new and different group, wish you'd mention that . . . I caught another melody similarity, which is a nicer name for it. The middle part of "Cocktails For Two" and the unforgettable "How Long Will It Last?"

The Embassy will be known as The Maytown, according to Commander Langworthy, who just called . . . Jack and Charlie didn't back it, it will be very exclusive, he added. Is that directed at Jack & Charles or us? . . . The only night spot you ever go to is the Casino de Paree, anyhow . . . Have the clubs really bored you that much? . . . Me too . . . The New Hope (Pa.) crowd tuned you in Sunday night, and you didn't use it . . . I explained you were overboard . . . But would use it this Sunday . . . Why did you bungle "fo-csle"? . . . You had it right the first time, you yap . . . I heard the score of "Home Town Boy" by Phil Charig with lyrics by Bradford Ropes. Both are grand and the critics should rave about them . . . Eddie Jackson, Durante's old partner, gets another crack at the Broadway he loves. Opens at the Paradise with new partners.

I was avalanched today with calls from disturbed subscribers, who demand that you hurl scallions at the cameraman for the Pathe group, for tantalizing some of the Sorrow Castle victims—when they were hysterical . . . Did you see some of those pictures? . . . Why??? . . . Why those inane queries when all they wanted was to be let alone? . . . Wouldn't it be a swell thing if a law made soapbox orators preface their denunciations of America with: "I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States and to the republic for which it stands, etc.?" . . . Then if they give vent to their foamings at the mouth, it would make them all the more inconsistent . . . There's a chorine in "Saluta" named Carnie Ellis, a Greek girl . . . Yes, her father owns a restaurant . . . The Theater of Young America starts at the Cosmopolitan about October 1 . . . Remember Reed Harris, the Columbia student ousted by Nick Butler? . . . He's connected with it—and it is a no-profit venture. Give it a lift.

M. Chevalier couldn't stop adoring Leah Ray at rehearsal the other day with the Phil Harris orchestra . . . I see by the papers that alien seamen are blamed for much of the panic on the Ward Liner . . . And that the line prefers alien seamen! . . . Congressman Nesbit, who took up your battle against so many aliens getting jobs on American boats in preference to Yankee Doodlers, should know this . . . You really should hear "The 5 Spirits of Rhythm" and Art Tatum at the Onyx Club . . . It's a musician's hangout, and they go there to hear these sepias "go to town."

• I have never heard much hot music or rhythm anywhere.

The Boswells are set for the Vallee flicker . . . Helen Morgan has been signed to one of those ridiculous seven-year contracts . . . Why seven years? . . . When they don't want you they can get rid of you, you knnow . . . Jules Brulatour, I hear, has had quite a row with Universal films because they are tied up with Agfa, a German firm . . . Brulatour has loaned considerable monies to those picture outfits, and because he is said to be non-Aryan, the quarrel started . . . Gail Patrick got her notice at Columbia . . . She is so beautiful . . . She says she's glad—she will try the stage again here . . . Franchot Tone wants to sing! . . . He has an opera voice, they say . . . Funny that nobody thought of Anna May Wong for "Good Earth." . . . James Mitchell, the columnist, who died on the coast after a long illness, was liked by everybody . . . Joan Crawford contributed the funds for his medical treatment, hospital and other expenses. That's the kind of guy she is.

Several chorus girls from "As Thousands Cheer" complain about salaries in the show . . . They assert Mr. Sam Harris doesn't know they are being paid less than the minimum. If so—why don't they tell Equity? . . . And who all those society girls for Reinhardt's spectacle in the H'wood Bowl? . . . With so many chorines wanting jobs . . . One of your readers phoned just now because you panned something or other . . . He said it just goes to show that all your taste is in your mouth . . . Go stand in a corner . . . This season's fashions make a woman look sedate only if she is standing still . . . The moment she starts moving, unexpected slits and slashes appear in her skirt, at the shoulders and anywhere else where patches of nudity and silk look alluring.

HOLLYWOOD PLAYERS SHOW PRANKS IN CIRCUS

SEEIN' STARS -:- BY FEG MURRAY

Actors Out For Time In Tent

By LLOYD PANTAGES

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 15.—There were four very strange looking people who joined the rest of the performers in the parade at the Barnum & Bailey-Ringling Brothers circus t'other night, when none other than Robert Montgomery and Chester Morris, done up in sideburns and beards, galloped about the tent, while their respective frails were laced up in sequins and wigs doing the same thing. After the parade was over, the gentlemen, sans the little women, dressed up in clown suits and rushed all over the tent making faces at people. Some fun, eh, kid?

The Glenda Farrell-Robert Riskin romance is very much aglow. The gentleman who said that Jim Thorpe, the famous Carlisle Indian, was broke and in New York looking for a waiter's job, couldn't have been more mistaken, seeing as how he has been in Hollywood for a year, and at the moment is working as an actor in Raoul Walsh's new opera, "East River." As for me, I was a little confused when I said that Mr. Walsh would show an Irish "wake" in his new picture. It is really an Irish wedding.

Smart fellow this little 12-year-old Frankie Thomas who was brought out from New York's stage production of "Wednesday's Child" to act his same role for the cinema. He gave the RKO officials such a sales talk about his mater and pater, that they were both given screen tests and both have a contract at the studio.

If Eddie Lowe is discovered walking around bent over, it will be due to the fact that his histrionics for the next four weeks, will be confined to a tunnel in "East River." Speaking of tunnels, it is the very first time that workmen actually digging the tunnels under the Hudson River have ever been shown on the screen.

Poets' Love In Penn

By MARGARET RUSSELL

Norma Shearer does a fine, sensitive portrait of the romantic mid-Victorian poetess, Elizabeth Browning, in the screen version of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" in the Penn this week. The same can scarcely be said for Fredric March's interpretation of the poet, Browning. A slight hangover from his recent Cellini role colors his acting to a disturbing degree. He cannot leave off being March long enough to be convincing, although he is a charming and amusingly vital Browning.

Charles Laughton is such a sinister Barrett pere that he evokes whole-hearted audience dislike for himself and universal sympathy for the ugly plight of Elizabeth Barrett and her brothers and sisters. He is a bit wooden, but always master of his difficult role.

The picture, of course, as the play, is not one of action. Unless the spectator is deeply interested in the cruel web of circumstances superinduced by parent personality domination, the plot may seem to drag. The moments of drama, precipitated by ruthless "Pappa" Barrett, are gripping in their fierce intensity. Every light moment afforded by the uncanny perceptions of Elizabeth Barrett's dog Flush, by her whimsical little maid servant and by her rebellious, fun-loving sister, Henrietta, are infinitely necessary to lighten the heavy theme.

Speaking of lightening heavy themes, "The Wise Little Hen" does just that thing in the all color Walt Disney Silly Symphony part of the program. Based on a chicken-pig-duck version of the ancient grasshopper and ant legend, it is delightful and amusing to children and grownups alike. The remainder of the program includes a short subject "Goofy Movies," and Hearst Metrotone News.

Pitt's Show Sparkles

By ZORA D. UNKOVICH

It's a sparkling show in the Pitt this week. Starts off with a merry tum-diddity-dum of banjos, moving on to a whirling aerial finish. There's some finished dancing in Dorothy Martin's "Moonlight Fantasy," which includes an especially breathless adagio top-notcher. Of a breathless nature, too, are Renee, Vic and Emily's aerial acrobatics, supplying a whole circus full of thrills.

Smooth moving magic you'll see in Duval's scarf—producing smoke rings, and amusing tapping by the gobs on leave, Petit and Douglas. Dancing, music, comedy combine the Master of Grace, while Gosh and Barrow, in "Hiccoughs," exercise your laugh chords plenty.

The audience likes Elaine and Douglas with their banjos, too, but the really musical welcome home is given to Baby Rosamond, the McKees Rocks dancing, accordeon-playing youngster, who's seen seeing the country from the stage.

Jack Holt, a lawyer out to win, and Jean Arthur, his idealistic clerk, work out a court picture on the screen, "The Defense Rests," in which good triumphs over evil in a fairly amusing fashion. More elemental and wise-cracking, however, is the contributing short, "Back to the Soil," with George Sidney and Charles Murray heading for a peck of trouble.

HOT FROM HOLLYWOOD By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 15.—Hello! Darryl Zanuck, Twentieth Century's busy boss, the man who remembers how to make four or five big movies at once, and how to play polo on Sundays, is feverishly preparing "The Mighty Barnum," to star Wally Beery, but he also is thinking of Maurice Chevalier's tune-film, "The Red Cat." To assure the film of a swell cast, Zanuck grabbed Pert Kelton for the important and snippy role of Mimi, although actual production is many weeks away.

Miss Kelton

Sol M. Wurtzel, Fox producer, has formed a production board with Joseph Engel and Milton Schwartz in charge. Their duties will be to advise on all yarns in preparation and the selection of new material.

A few hours after June Knight had called it quits with Universal, the Warner plant had her in a new and rather startling makeup doing tests for "Sweet Music," the Rudy Vallee musical, which Al Green will direct. Although the deal isn't set at this writing, my "inside informant" hints that June's a cinch for the role—and maybe a term ticket.

Some weeks ago RKO sent for Frankie Thomas, age 12, who, despite his years, is rated as a seasoned footlight veteran.

While acting a featured role in "Wednesday's Child," Frankie slyly but insistently promoted screen tests for his mamma and papa, Mona Bruns and Frank Thomas.

And, what's more, pop and ma made good—and received contracts!

The hottest romance of filmdom was blazing in Karlsbad, Germany, where Frank Orsatti and Antoinette (Toni) Chase couldn't see enough of each other! Paul Frawley's (Bill's brother) also there—to lose weight for Bill, he claims!

An Oakland fight promoter wrote a letter to "Slapsie" Maxie Rosenbloom who, with a remodeled ear, has entered the movies, to sign up for a fistic battle, suggesting that Maxie bring along Mae West and George Raft as added attractions. Maxie wired:

"Just had a chat with Greta Garbo and she would like to come up to Oakland for the bout. Will she do instead of Mae West and George Raft?"

Note: They are now pouring ICE water over the promoter.

Genevieve Tobin has her shell-pink ear listening to Broadway offers. In fact, Producer Max Gordon submitted Sidney Howard's latest play to her—and she's weakening.

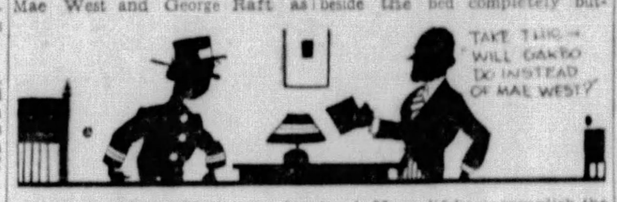
One of my eastern snoopers reports that Abe Lyman is still interested in Thelma Todd.

Margaret Sullavan is carrying her arm in a sling because "she fall down and go boom!" again . . . The biggest Hollywood mystery in years and years! George E. Stone sleeps in custom - made pajamas, featuring a high neck and many - buttoned jacket. Sunday night much to his amazement George awoke to find himself minus the jacket. Still more puzzling is the fact that the jacket was on the floor beside the bed completely buttoned. How did he accomplish the Houdini-like feat in his sleep?

Miss Sullavan



The real reason Irene Colman didn't join the Harry Richman show is Willy Costello, Universal's handsome foreigner. If there's another expression for "They're ga-ga about each other," they're it! . . . Rouben Mamoulian tossed off an elaborate cocktail party for Max Reinhardt—and, of course, practically everybody dropped in at some time or other to shake Max's hand and nibble at expensive dainties. Hyman Fink, cinemaland's chatterbox and ever-present photographer, finally managed another pictorial scoop—Anna Sten and Marlene (so lovely in black velvet and tam to match) Dietrich meeting for the first time.

Big Flight In News

With the government planning to raise the Navy's air strength to 2,000 planes, a thrilling spectacle is staged at Hampton Roads, Va., where a mass review is held of 200 sky eagles, and is pictured in Hearst Metrotone News.

The tennis match between Fred Perry, world's champion, and Wilmer Austin, Texas ace, is shown at Forest Hills.

From Moscow, Russia, come the first pictures of the largest airplane in the world, the Maxim Gorky, in its first tryout.

A gorgeous baby parade, the last of the summer, entrances crowds at Long Beach, Cal.

Firemen of Versailles thrill crowds from Gay Paree with an unusual exhibition of gymnastics.

A one-man baby submarine makes its debut in Lake Michigan as Barney Connat, the inventor, demonstrates it.

The Pennsylvania State Police give Scranton a thrilling show of expert horsemanship.

Comedy With Some Song Is Bill In Stanley

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Comedy is the keynote, the footnote, the top note—all the notes—in a bill that the Stanley is presenting as a certain specific for the malady known as the blues. It not only has a fun piece, "She Loves Me Not," as the feature, but also offers Popeye, The Sailor, in cartooned adventures showing his prowess as a woodman in "Axe Me Another."

Miriam Hopkins heads the cast of "She Loves Me Not," screen version of a hit farce of last season in New York. The play has not been seen here, so one can only assume that there are a number of things in it—songs by Bing Crosby for one—that the original did not have, but they all make for entertainment.

It is just laughs and a little romance, but plenty of action, with nothing to classify it in particular but the tag of rollicking mirth. Miss Hopkins plays a cabaret dancer who flees a night club when there is a shooting, because she does not want to be a witness. She finds refuge in a dormitory at Princeton, aided by Bing and another student. A press agent for a picture company learns where she is and sets out to make her a "star" and cash in on the publicity. Gangsters learn where she is and go to take her for a ride. Bing's fiancee gets word, too, and arrives to tell her a few things. The dean of the university wants an explanation about it. They all get into the room almost simultaneously—and is there doings!

But all turns out well.

Princeton alumni may or may not be interested in a massed protesting body of students singing the songs dear to old Nassau as they parade in a demonstration against the expulsion of the girl-aiding chaps.

Miss Hopkins portrays the principal role with amusing boldness, and Mr. Crosby shows improvement in his efforts to be an actor. You'll like him even if you despise crooners. Kitty Carlisle is wholesome as the antithesis of the Hopkins character. Henry Stephenson makes a human dean. Lynne Overman's quavering voice is nicely suited to the press agent part, and Warren Hymer does his perpetual gangster type in his customary style, which is A-1.

GREETING BING CROSBY

By RADIE HARRIS

Born in Tacoma, Washington, May 2, 1904 . . . Christened Harry Lillis Crosby . . . Was nicknamed "Bing" because he shouted, "bing, bing" the loudest in every cowboy and Indian game . . . Now has every film producer in Hollywood shouting for him . . . Doesn't read a note of music . . . And the only instruments he plays are the radio and phonograph . . . Won a varsity baseball letter at Gonzaga University . . . Where he started out to be a lawyer . . . And wound up as a trap drummer in the college orchestra . . . Always wears a hat while broadcasting . . . And never wears garters except with evening clothes . . . Is incorporated as Bing Crosby, Ltd., Inc. . . . All movie, radio and recording checks are paid into the company . . . And Bing draws a salary as president . . . Can't say "no" to any request . . . So hired Brother Everett as his business manager . . . And "no" is the only word Ev. knows . . . Next to singing, golf and fishing are his two pet enthusiasms . . . Recently caught a 197-pound marlin swordfish . . . And thought more of the fish than he did his new Paramount contract . . . And that's no fish story! . . . Chews gum incessantly . . . And likes a soft drink before breakfast . . . Owes his first big chance to Paul Whiteman, who discovered him in the Million Dollar Theater in Los Angeles . . . And signed him pronto as one of his Three Rythm Boys . . . Will never accept an invitation to a formal party if he knows the hostess is going to ask him to "sing for his supper" . . . Will never accept a formal invitation anyway . . . Because he detests evening clothes . . . Reads everything that Dashiel Hammett writes . . . And never misses a Sylvia Sidney or a Jackie Cooper picture . . . Morton Downey and Ethel Waters are his favorite radio personalities . . . His biggest ambition right now is to own a yacht . . . The only screen criticism he has ever kept is one from Washington, D. C. . . . It reviewed "College Humor" . . . And never once mentioned Bing's name! . . . Is married happily . . . Very happily to Dixie Lee . . . They have one son, Gary Evans . . . And just co-starred on an even greater production . . . Twin boys.

SORROW AWAITS THEM, WOULD-BE RUNAWAY GIRLS TOLD

Chums Craving Broader, Bigger Life Advised To Heed Curfew

By Marion Brunot

Weighed in the BALANCE, but imagination seldom found wanting, that is the modern young woman.

And when there are two girls together, there is just two times as much imagination.

Two such girls write to me. They are chums. Always together at the corner soda fountains. Parading the streets arm in arm. Sitting in secluded nooks discoursing upon life as it is for them, and how they should like it to be.

They go to the movies together, and therein lies the trouble. For, after the entertainment is over, the two of them wander along aimlessly, gazing at the show windows, and glancing slyly at the boys. And when finally they arrive at the home doors, it is 11 o'clock.

THINK HOUR TOO LATE

And their mothers, having the eternal open eye of nearly all women who have children, think the hour too late.

And there are arguments over this. The mothers disapprove. The girls' fathers have a way of agreeing with the girls, and especially when talking alone with their daughters . . . This gives the young women fresh courage.

They crave a bigger and broader life. There must be plenty of laughter and change and drama in it. Older women are so narrow in their viewpoint. Younger women are the only ones who are up-to-date. So reason Victoria and her chum.

They have even considered running away.

They agree they might be homesick. For they have had everything nice, in a material fashion, under their parents' roofs.

Young girls can find no safer ancorage than their own homes.

Walking the highways, and with no destination, is even worse than homesickness. The thing may beckon romantically.

Yet would the pleasantries of such an existence make up for the hardships?

SORROW AT END

I read a book recently. Its vividness remained with me for days. It was about the young tramps of today. Boys and girls, in their teens, who are hiking through this country with no ambition, no future. Waiting for freight trains. Being barked at by farmer's dogs. Mating with crime . . . And what was the outcome?

Nothing but sorrow. And weary eyes looking out on the wrong side of life.

Yet some of these youthful travelers came from good, respectable families. Their reasons for moving on were no greater than yours, Victoria.

No matter what anyone tells you to the contrary, the hardest thing to learn in life is self-mastery.

TRY A NEW ANGLE

Life is entirely too short for any colossal mistakes. Running away would be one of these. Errors, no matter how shameful, never hang so heavy over our heads if these errors can be shared with the home people . . . It is when they must be endured alone that the stark reality of them is too much for us.

Eleven o'clock is too late for the streets.

For, after all, the curfew hour will always be ringing. It may move on, or backwards . . . It will be sounding, anyway.

And, what is more, you had better listen. That is, if you want a life that is full, and yet not running over, and wasting itself.

LEAVING OUR ROMPERS FOREVER

By Prunella Wood

KINDERGARTEN overtakes many a near-toddler for the first time this autumn, and clothes that are somewhat grub-proof delight the shopping mamma's eyes. Brother and sister clothes—models that are identical except that one runs to pants for the heir of the house and the other to skirts for the debutante—make a hit with women who have gathered a brood for a farmily, as orders can be given in duplicate down to the last accessory, and much time saved.

* * *

LINEN IS A good buy, even for the season which approaches winter. There will be plenty of muggy days in November, and when the cold snap comes it is clothes for outdoors which should supply the warmth to babies, allowing for our well known American steam heat which is gleefully released in all public buildings as soon as possible.

Into the tub such models go, and come out fresh and appealing as ever.

THERE ARE numerous cotton tweeds which look like wool, make excellent frocks and are washable.

Challis is a good material, lightweight and somewhat woolly, though it may be a little more on the Sunday side than the schoolday side of junior fashions. Linen blouses and kilties make a fine uniform, as they may be worn with sweaters or with top coats.

The brother and sister act sketched above is developed in baby blue linen with crisp white handkerchief linen collars and cuffs. Note the scalloped closings, buttoned with white pearl buttons.

Cute little number, left above, is the sister suit of the sailor boy's outfit, in brown and yellow whipcord. Mary Anne on the bench wears a cotton shepherd check in brown and white, which looks like wool; the collar is white linen and the frogs are brown silk.

Gay Youth Pays Big Price

By Angelo Patri

A happy youth spreads joy wherever he goes. When a carefree healthy youngster strides down the street, a spring in his step, the light of youth in his eyes, the breeze blowing his tousled hair into waving sunlight, the weary faces of time-worn people light up, their bent shoulders straighten. Happy, healthy, carefree youth is a tonic to all who come close to it. We cannot have too many such boys.

But we have a few, and no matter how small the number it is too large, who are gay boys. One lately suspended from college came in to see me and complained about the old style dean of boys who had thrown him out. The dean had sent him home to think things over, wise man that he was.

"Why did the dean send you down?"

MUST HAVE FUN

"He had a hate on me, I guess. Anybody who has a little life in him gets his ire. I'm a live wire myself. Like a good time once in a while. After all I'm not my own grandfather. I have to have a little fun. A little fun doesn't hurt anybody. You can't be Johnny-on-the-Spot all the time."

"No. You can't. But you haven't told me what you did that brought the dean down on you. What did you do that he refused to stand for any longer. He is a very understanding man where boys are concerned."

"Well, he thinks I smoke too much."

"Do you? How many a day?"

"Maybe — 50 — maybe — O, it depends. I know I do smoke too much, but I can stop that. Any time. It isn't that I have formed the habit."

"Your body is soaked in nicotine. You carry the odor about with you. That always indicates excessive smoking. What else?"

"He thinks a drink or two is awful. I told you he is an old maid. No smoking, no drinking, in bed every night by 10. That's the gay program he laid down for me and of course I couldn't stand for that."

So that was it. Out every night until dawn in spite of the rules. Smoking and drinking to excess. Attending to the gay life he thought so manly and letting his splendid youth go by unused, unappreciated. A fine boy of 19 going to the dogs because he thought it smart to laugh at the professors, at the rules, at everything and everybody opposed to his program.

THE GAY BOY

Fathers and mothers devote their best years to rearing their children. They go without things they have to have, they need to have, in order to send their children to college. Every once in a while one of these gay boys appears. Totally unconscious of anything but their own cheap desires they waste all this sacrifice, devotion and opportunity.

Public opinion is against the gay boy. Nobody wants him in any responsible relationship. College does not want him, business and industry has no use for him, friends shun him. When the money that feeds the gaiety runs out, he is out. If the gay boy would only consider the price he is paying for his nonsense, he would take hold of himself and go over to the other side. Healthy, eager, mounting youth is such a joy, and such an inspiration. How can any intelligent boy make such a mistake?

Don't Let Boy Friend's Pal Take Him Away From You

The young people for whom everything would be smooth if only it were not for the chum of the young man . . . And this chum has such power, too. One girl wants help in this very problem.

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am a faithful reader of your column. I am 18, and for the last two years have gone with a very likeable chap.

The few quarrels we have had have been over a boy friend of his. This young man has great influence over my friend. He always has resented our going together, and has done everything he can to break it up. Finally, when my friend's sister told me that this chum and her brother were going out with other girls, my pride became uppermost, and for consolation I went out with an old beau.

He, however, resented this, and the result is we have broken altogether.

Please advise, Miss Brunot,

A SISTER.

The boy chum evidently has worked the havoc he desires. And why let him do so? If you really like the young man, and I feel sure you do, make an immediate effort to renew your romance. This can be done through his sister, or by a letter.

To deal successfully with a friend such as your beau has, there are two ways. Either assert yourself, and become the master of the situation, and put him entirely out of the way. Or use the kinder and wiser method, and win his liking.

The day may come when he proves as fine a friend for you as he is for your young man.

Invalids Must Be Made Comfortable in Bed

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland

Dr. Copeland

Persons confined to bed because of illness or physical disability often become afflicted with what is known as "bed sores." This is a very annoying condition and if neglected may lead to serious infection of the skin.

Bed sores can be prevented when the skin of the invalid is properly cared for and the necessary precautions taken to avoid irritation. Bear in mind that the invalid has poor resistance against disease and the tone of the skin is below par. Hence friction and irritation of the elbows, knees and buttocks may give rise to bed sores.

Every effort should be made to avoid irritation of the skin. The sheets of the bed should be soft and free from wrinkles and excess starch. This precaution is especially necessary for those persons who have sensitive skins. Additional protection is afforded by the use of soft pads and cushions to those parts of the body which are constantly in contact with the bed linen. A frequent change of position, with change of the pillow, is helpful.

The patient should be bathed as frequently as possible with lukewarm water and a pure, white soap, preferably castile. Following this, an alcohol sponge may be given. The parts should be dried by patting and not rubbing.

The value of dusting powder in the prevention of bed sores cannot be over-emphasized. Do not use a heavy or coarse powder. An excellent powder can be made by mixing equal parts of zinc stearate, corn starch and any good dusting powder.

Frequent change of position is often difficult, especially for the person at home who is invalided because of a fracture of the arm or leg. As a rule the plaster cast is cumbersome and hinders movement of the patient. Often the afflicted person hesitates to move because of pain or fear of dislocating the broken limb. Yet movement is imperative if bed sores are to be avoided. With care and practice the patient can be moved and the parts bathed and powdered.

A good plan is to alternate beds when the condition of the patient permits his being moved. Of course, this should be undertaken only by a strong member of the household in order to avoid the danger of dropping or jarring the patient. This is easily done by moving two beds close together and rolling or lifting the patient from one to the other. This procedure permits the change of mattress and bedding and, in addition, allows the invalid a change that is beneficial to the muscles and skin.

Inattention to hygiene is often the underlying cause of infected, painful bed sores. In cases of diarrhea and other intestinal disorders the excreta contains irritating and excoriating substances which, if allowed to come in contact with the skin, leads to irritating sores. Every effort must be made to guard against this occurrence.

Proper care and cleanliness of the bed-ridden patient is of great importance. When this is overlooked convalescence is retarded. The few suggestions I have outlined will be helpful in preventing this distressing complication.

Her Mistake

For a few days I was very fortunate in getting a ride into town in a machine with a friend of mine. Then, one morning while waiting for a street car I saw a familiar looking car drive slowly up to the curb and stop several feet away from me. Being certain it was my friend, naturally I ran toward the car. Without taking a further glance, I opened the door and got in. There, to my surprise, I saw before me a total stranger. It was quite a shock for the driver to see a stranger, too, his reason for stopping he told me was slight motor trouble. Seeing how embarrassed I was, he offered to drive me to town. I did not refuse him because I felt so humiliated before all the other people standing at the carline.

Gentle Art of Makeup Handed Down Through the Ages

By Charmion Penn

Harking back to Cleopatra (and we're doing it every day . . . from the movies to the new sandals and whatnot!) . . . one finds that the gentle art of makeup is something that has been handed down through the ages. This business of "gilding the lily" has been frowned upon from time to time, yet there are few people today that argue that it is better to go on looking pale and uninteresting if you can be colorful, lovely and alluring because of a little something that came out of a box!

Naturally . . . one of the first requisites for good coloring and attractiveness is health. All the "perfume in Arabia" as well as all the lipsticks in town won't help you out if you are sallow and dispirited in your facial expression. However . . . there are lots of things you can do to help beauty along provided you have a reasonably good skin and physical condition to build on.

CHOOSE POWDER WELL

For one thing . . . be a little careful how you choose your powder. Too many of us make the mistake of deciding "I'm a blonde" and then make a grab for a nice-colored lightish powder. The mere fact that you may be a blonde or a brunette doesn't mean that the first light powder or dark that you come across is proper for you. Consider two more things—has the powder your own skin tones (which may even contain green, for that matter!) . . . and is it the proper texture for your skin? Now some people require a fairly heavy powder for their skins, whereas others should use only the thinnest and softest possible!

It's amusing to find just how many skin tones there are in one's own epidermis! Blues, mauves and greens are most common in blondes . . . while orange, yellows and the fruity shades are what go to make up the satiny sheen of the true brunette. Girls with a "medium" skin have a blending. And this is always brought home very forcibly as one watches the beauty operator blending powder to match someone's skin. For the day of the whitened nose and pinky cheeks has faded into the past. It's a matter of having a nice "finished" look today . . . the dull luster that one hears so much about in fashion notes and such!

HIGHLIGHT SKIN

Really smart women are seeing to it that their skins are clear and "finished" with a suitable powder. Then . . . they "highlight" them . . . and this is one of the most outstanding points of the new ideas as brought out for this new season. The eyes in particular must be expressive. For this there are a number of useful "tricks." Leaving a little cream on the lids and around the edges of the eyes is one easy way . . . just don't wipe it off them when you're cleaning the rest of your face.

A touch of eye shadow in the right places (blended up toward the brow from the edge of the upper lid) . . . although eye shadow is usually advisable for evening wear only. DON'T wear it under the eye! The only effect it can have is to make you look as if you had been burning the candle at both ends, and there's nothing very attractive about that.

Elongate the eyes, when it is necessary and becoming. This is simple . . . done with an eyebrow pencil . . . a couple of swift strokes from the outer corner of the eye, blended a trifle with the finger. Slant them upward if you have eyes that will "take" this . . . or straight as in the case of most.

Sometimes It Pays to Trade Bridge Trick for Entry

By Josephine Culbertson

Mrs. Culbertson

There are times when an entry is so important to the Declarer that it is worth while for him to give up a sure winner, and suffer the loss of a trick in exchange for it. One of the most spectacular of such cases occurs when, though easily able to draw the opponents' trumps without losing a trick, Declarer is willing to lose a trump trick unnecessarily.

In the hand below, South found that a Slam depended upon the sacrifice of a trick to an outstanding eight spot, although he himself held all six of the high cards in that suit. In fact, he even had to make elaborate preparations for the sacrifice play or he would have found that his contract was gone for the paradoxical reason that he was no longer able to throw a trick away.

South, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ K Q J 5 ♡ 7 6 ◇ 8 4 3 2 ♣ 9 6 4
♠ 10 6 3 ♡ 8 5 ◇ A K Q J ♣ K J 8 5	West North East South	♠ 9 8 7 4 2 ♡ 3 ◇ 10 9 7 6 5 ♣ 10 7
	♠ A ♡ A K Q J 10 9 4 2 ◇ — ♣ A Q 3 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 N T	Pass
4 ♣ (1)	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—Still forcing; South wants to know if North can give even a delayed raise in clubs.

South practically bid the Small Slam in hearts all by himself; he had no assurance that he could ever get into North's hand to use whatever strength in spades North might have, because South's singleton Ace caused the suit to be blocked. The Slam was not a bad gamble, however, and anyone would have bid it after North's positive response to the opening two-bid showed values in excess of one honor-trick. If North had as much as the club Jack there would be some play for six.

West opened the diamond King, and immediately South had to decide exactly how he was to play the hand. A slip on the first trick would have been fatal.

North's spades were good winning cards, but they would be without value unless South could get to the North hand to lead them. In that case South would be blocked in his own hand, and would sooner or later have to lead clubs, thus losing at least two tricks. But a careful survey of the relative rank of all the hearts soon showed South that Dummy's heart 7 6 furnished one sure entry. Let the adversaries take their heart 8; the second heart in Dummy would then be higher than any East or West held, and thus would open the door to North's hand. But in order for one of these small hearts to win a trick, South would have to hold a smaller heart. For this reason, South ruffed the first diamond with the heart 9. He then laid down the spade Ace, freeing North's suit. Next the deuce of hearts was played, and the best West could do was to grab a trick with his eight. Another diamond led by West was ruffed by South's heart 10, and the heart 4 put Dummy in and at the same time drew West's last trump. Now on the spade K Q J South discarded his deuce, three and Queen of clubs, leaving in his hand nothing but winning cards. The heart 8 was the only trick South lost, and he deservedly scored a Small Slam.

Matron May Be Bridesmaid

By Mrs. Beeckman

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

What is proper in a case like this: My best girl friend and I are inseparable. If either of us should marry, the other, still being single, could act as bridesmaid. After the first marriage, should the bridesmaid marry later, is there any reason why the first bride cannot "stand up" for her? In other words, is it permissible and quite proper for a married woman to attend a bride in the capacity of bridesmaid? Other than a matron of honor, is it proper?

ARDENT READERS.

It makes no difference whether the attendants of the bride and groom are married or not. The bride's chief attendant may be a maid of honor, and her bridesmaids may be married or unmarried. The only important fact is that the bride wants to have them as her attendants.

Appropriate Gifts.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I've been going about with a young man for a year now. We aren't engaged yet, but I want to give him a present for his birthday. Is it proper to give him a wristwatch? If not, what would you suggest for him? He doesn't smoke, and he has almost everything. GIRL.

Since you aren't engaged to this young man, you shouldn't give him such a consequental present as a wristwatch, any more than he should give you presents of jewelry.

To wear with his evening clothes, several plain white, sheer linen handkerchiefs, monogrammed, would be a good and appreciated gift. Or some handkerchiefs for day wear, a gift appropriate for some sport, an accessory for his desk or for his traveling bag, or one or two books.

Bebe in Lion's Den

Little Buddy, aged 5, always expected a story before going to bed. Buddy's mother had been reading to him from the Bible and the child was familiar with many of the verses. Daytime Dress To Be Plain

By Dorothy Roe

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Priestlike simplicity for daytime, the gorgeousness of Cleopatra in all her glory for after dark—that's the blueprint of the winter season.

Under the simplicity department comes a new high in tailored smartness consisting of a wool ensemble in tobacco brown woolen, devoid of frills and furbelows.

The dress is severity itself, with a small clerical collar edged in white, four patch pockets, a raised and belted waistline, and three buttons down the front of the blouse.

Belt and buttons are of russet saddle leather, the fabric is a crepey woolen, and there's not a line or a wrinkle out of place in the tailored whole.

With the frock is worn a straight line coat of heavier woolen in matching brown, with tailored revers and complete lining of a soft beige fur called chevrette.

You wear a felt hat of the fedora type with it, and match your oxfords and your gloves to the belt and buttons, and there you are.

If you want to add a touch of color to the austerity of the frock, you may tie a gay bandanna of necktie silk around your neck.

Or you may substitute a green suede belt and green buttons and hat.

Starting with the solid foundation of excellent tailoring and fabric, there are limitless variations to the possible trimmings.

ROAST CAPON STUFFED WITH FRUIT WINS FIRST RECIPE AWARD

Prize Given Geranium Jelly

By Prudence Penny

Did you ever try roast capon stuffed with "fruit? You never did? Well, you must admit it sounds like a grand idea. Like a veritable dish fit "to set before the king." And while we are being fanciful today, rose geranium jelly might very well be what a "fairy queen" would consider her favorite sweet.

Beginning Monday Prudence Penny will award five $1 prizes daily for your favorite recipes. Send in recipes as often as you like, but not too many at a time. Remember only one prize can be granted to each individual at a time. Write on only one side of the paper and have your name and address at the top of each sheet. No recipes can be returned. Here are today's prize-winning recipes:

Five Dollar Prize Winner

MRS. JOHN A. GRANT,
139 Superior avenue, Emsworth.

ROAST CAPON STUFFED WITH FRUIT

Four cups month bread crumbs.
Fourteen wholesome boiled chestnuts or walnuts.
Four canned apricots.
Six stewed prunes.
Three boiled or canned pears.
Four canned or stewed peaches.
One egg beaten light.
One-half cup apricot juice.
Clean a capon, season inside and out with salt. Mix above ingredients lightly with fork. Stuff capon, truss, and put in roasting pan. Cover with slices of fat salt pork. Surround with one carrot and one onion sliced; sprig of parsley, stalk of celery, one-fourth cup butter or chicken fat. Bake in very hot oven (500 degrees F.) for 15 minutes, then reduce heat and cook in moderately hot oven one and one-third hours, basting frequently. Remove capon to platter and remove pork. Make gravy by browning fat in pan with about five tablespoons flour. Add two cups boiling water or stock. Stir and boil five minutes. Season with salt and pepper.

Five $1 Prize Winners

MRS. L. C. BOYLE,
Fourth street, Apollo.

TOMATO MAYONNAISE

Two medium-sized tomatoes.
Yolks of two hard cooked eggs.
One raw EGG yolk.
One-half teaspoon salt.
One-half cup salad oil.
Two drops tabasco sauce (may be omitted).
One teaspoon scraped onion.
One tablespoon vinegar.

Dip tomatoes in scalding water to loosen the skins. Drop in cold water to cool, then peel. Cut in two crosswise, and with the pointed tip of a spoon lift out seeds. Place in a bowl and chop fine, then drain in a sieve while preparing rest of dressing. Mash cooked egg yolk, add raw egg yolk, salt, tabasco sauce and beat vigorously. Add salad oil a little at a time, and continue mixing until mixture holds its shape (a little more oil may be needed). Add onion and vinegar. When ready to serve add tomato pulp. This first mixture may be made ahead of time, since it keeps perfectly covered and in cool place. Add tomato pulp when ready to serve.

MRS. MAY LARNER,
435 Fourth street, Monongahela.

MUSHROOM FRITTERS

One large cup chopped cooked mushrooms, canned or fresh.
Three-fourths cup milk.
One egg.
One level teaspoon salt.
One heaping teaspoon baking powder.
Enough flour to make a stiff batter.

Drop batter the size of an oyster into hot fat. Fry to a golden brown. Serve hot.

MRS. SADIE MOORE,
1125 Wade street, Allquippa.

ROSE GERANIUM JELLY

Prepare pulp of apples as for a plain jelly. Boil juice thus obtained for 20 minutes. To each pint of juice add one pound of sugar and place in a preserving kettle over the fire. Stir until all the sugar has melted, then add two or three rose geranium leaves, bring to boiling point and boil rapidly four two minutes, removing any scum which may rise to the surface. Turn into sterilized jelly glasses, removing the leaves, and place a fresh leaf in each glass. Seal.

ESTHER ROTSTEIN,
5 Oakland square.

EGGS AND POTATOES

Three hard cooked eggs.
Two large cooked potatoes.
One cup hot sweet-sour sauce.
Fat.
Bread crumbs.
Salt and pepper.

Slice eggs and potatoes. Rub a baking dish with fat. Put in a layer of sauce. Add a layer of potatoes and a layer of eggs. Season. Continue until all potatoes and eggs are used, sprinkle with bread crumbs. Dot with fat and pour remainder of sauce on top. Serve hot.

SWEET-SOUR SAUCE

Two tablespoons fat.
Two tablespoons flour.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Two tablespoons sugar.
One-fourth teaspoon pepper.
Juice of one-half lemon.
Three-fourths cup water.

Brown flour in fat. Add seasoning and water slowly and cook until slightly thick and smooth, stirring constantly. Season with the sugar and lemon to taste.

MRS. M. MOSESSON,
11 Cleveland avenue, Uniontown.

CANTALOUPE SURPRISE JAM

One cantaloupe.
Three small pears.
One sour apple.
One orange.
One-half lemon.
Two cups sugar.
Pinch salt.

Peel cantaloupe, pears and apple and grind. Add grated rind and juice of orange and lemon, add sugar, and cook in casserole in slow oven until thick, or on top of stove stir often. Put in sterilized glasses and seal.

Miss America Goes to Chicago's World's Fair

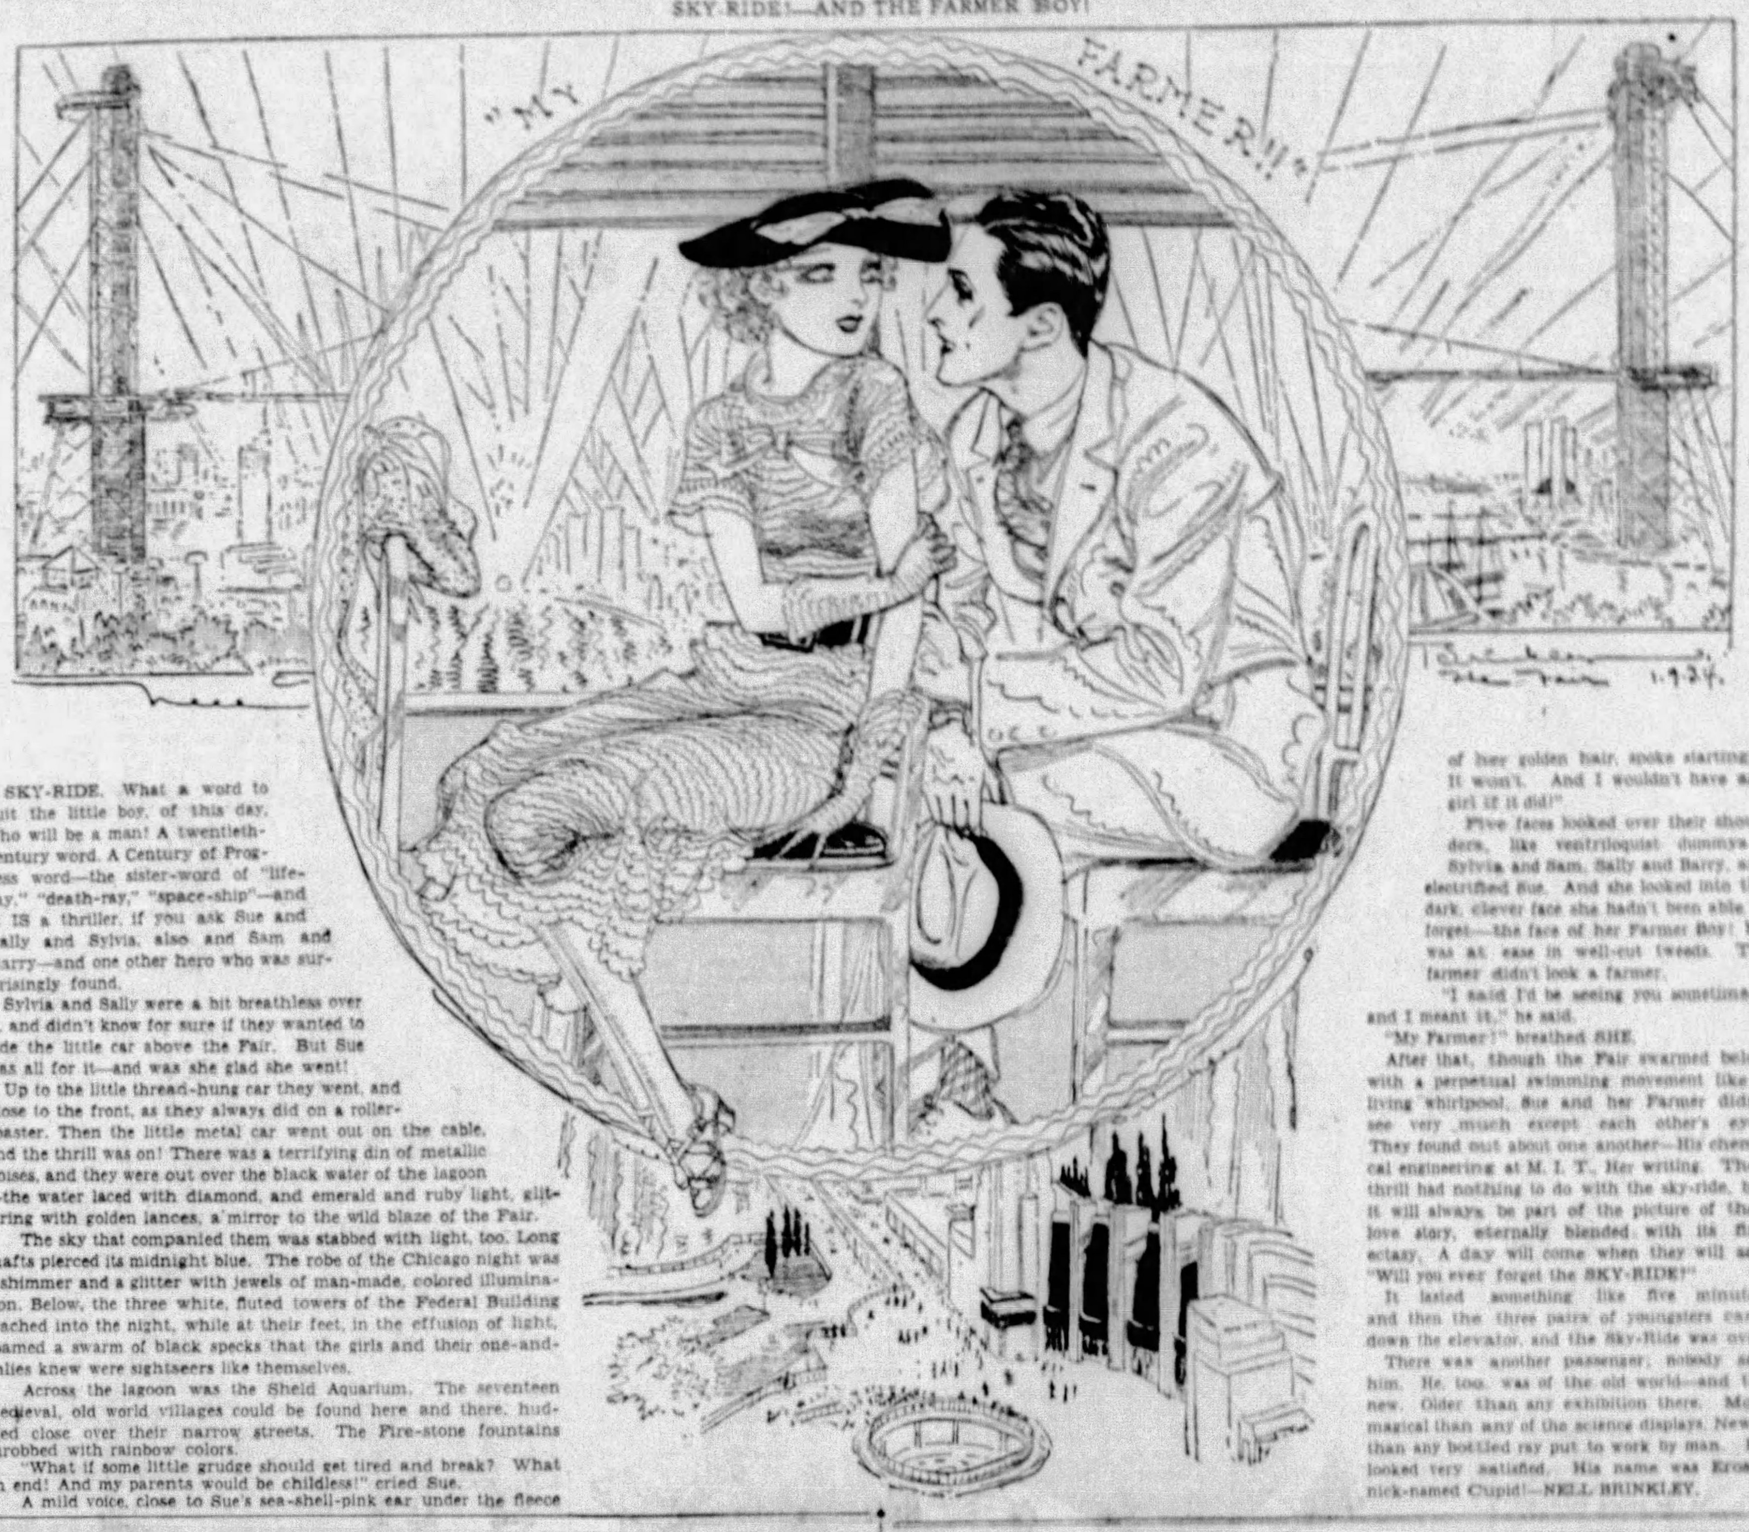
SKY-RIDE!—AND THE FARMER BOY!



SKY-RIDE. What a word to suit the little boy of this day, who will be a man! A twentieth-century word. A Century of Progress word—the sister-word of "life-ray," "death-ray," "space-ship"—and it IS a thriller, if you ask Sue and Sally and Sylvia, also and Sam and Barry—and one other hero who was surprisingly found.

Sylvia and Sally were a bit breathless over it, and didn't know for sure if they wanted to ride the little car above the Fair. But Sue was all for it—and was she glad she went!

Up to the little thread-hung car they went, and close to the front, as they always did on a roller-coaster. Then the little metal car went out on the cable, and the thrill was on! There was a terrifying din of metallic noises, and they were out over the black water of the lagoon—the water laced with diamond, and emerald and ruby light, glittering with golden lances, a mirror to the wild blaze of the Fair.

The sky that companied them was stabbed with light, too. Long shafts pierced its midnight blue. The robe of the Chicago night was a shimmer and a glitter with jewels of man-made, colored illumination. Below, the three white, fluted towers of the Federal Building reached into the night, while at their feet, in the effusion of light, roamed a swarm of black specks that the girls and their one-and-onlies knew were sightseers like themselves.

Across the lagoon was the Sheld Aquarium. The seventeen medieval, old world villages could be found here and there, huddled close over their narrow streets. The Fire-stone fountains throbbed with rainbow colors.

"What if some little grudge should get tired and break? What an end! And my parents would be childless!" cried Sue.

A mild voice, close to Sue's sea-shell-pink ear under the fleece of her golden hair, spoke startlingly. It won't. And I wouldn't have any girl if it did!"

Five faces looked over their shoulders, like ventriloquist dummys—Sylvia and Sam, Sally and Barry, and electrified Sue. And she looked into the dark, clever face she hadn't been able to forget—the face of her Farmer Boy! He was at ease in well-cut tweeds. The farmer didn't look a farmer.

"I said I'd be seeing you sometime—and I meant it," he said.

"My Farmer!" breathed SHE.

After that, though the Fair swarmed below with a perpetual swimming movement like a living whirlpool, Sue and her Farmer didn't see very much except each other's eyes. They found out about one another—His chemical engineering at M. I. T., Her writing. Their thrill had nothing to do with the sky-ride, but it will always be part of the picture of their love story, eternally blended with its first ecstasy. A day will come when they will say, "Will you ever forget the SKY-RIDE?"

It lasted something like five minutes, and then the three pairs of youngsters came down the elevator, and the Sky-Ride was over.

There was another passenger, nobody saw him. He, too, was of the old world—and the new. Older than any exhibition there. More magical than any of the science displays. Newer than any bottled ray put to work by man. He looked very satisfied. His name was Eros—nick-named Cupid!—NELL BRINKLEY.

Nuts Highly Valuable Food

By Alice L. Barry

Nuts form a highly valuable food, something that we are often inclined to overlook. The nutriment from a dish prepared from nuts makes an excellent substitute for a meat dish, for nuts are rich in protein and fats. Of course, nuts are obtainable all year round, but they are at their best when autumn approaches.

A most delicious sandwich filling may be made with nuts, one that is excellent for the children's school lunch box. Pound or grate finely three ounces blanched almonds, two ounces skinned walnut meats and two ounces pine kernels, mixing with orange or lemon juice or both.

A Sequel to Heart of a Wife

By Adele Garrison

"Oh! Is this necessary?" I exclaimed explosively as Lee Chow said that to tell his story he must go back to the time, years ago, when he first found out that I was the "hidden desire" of his friend's heart, that without me Hugh's life was "a desert, a waste place."

He opened his eyes to their fullest capacity, and looked at me with a surprised dignity that I guessed he meant should abash me.

"If it were not necessary for your proper understanding of my story, I never should dream of troubling you with it," he said, and I closed my lips tightly upon any further protest. He continued his steady gaze at me for a second, and then, evidently seeing that I did not mean to speak again, resumed his story. I kept myself from jumping up and running from the room only by the stern reminder that not only Hugh, but my father, was depending upon me to learn the secret behind the attack upon Dicky, to which we believed the high-born Chinese held the key.

FOR FRIEND, HUGH

"There are few occidentals who know the meaning of friendship as the Chinese know it," Lee Chow said, and I breathed more freely at his change of subject.

"My friend, Hugh Grantland, is one of those few," the faint voice went on. "I owe him more than ever can be told. I owe him my life many times over, and for years I have felt that my life was not my own, but must be held ready either for unstinted service to him, or even, if necessary, for the supreme sacrifice of forfeiting it for him."

I looked curiously at him. No, there was no semblance of madness in his eyes; instead, an unusual clarity. His was an inflexible purpose, I realized, and I shivered slightly at the recurrence of my fear that Hugh's fanatical friend might still be planning to remove Dicky from my life, in the hope that I then would turn to Hugh.

He had turned his eyes from me, but in some subtle fashion he was aware of my shuddering fear, and he looked squarely at me again.

"You are afraid of me," he said, "not for yourself, but for your husband. May I reassure you now, once and for all, that you need never fear me more? I was so benumbed after my—my seizure—that I could not make Hugh realize that I understood him. Yet I did know what he was saying, although I could not speak, and I want you to take this message back to him—that I accept what he has told me concerning you and your husband, and that I will obey his commands."

It was all I could do to keep from crying out, "What commands? What did he tell you?" But knowing something of the queer psychology of the man facing me, I kept silent, and had the gratification of seeing a faint glint of approval come into the black eyes regarding me so steadily.

LEE CHOW'S PLANS

"You know when to keep silence," he said, and the tone with which he invested the words was equal to the most extravagant praise from many men. "Therefore," he went on, "I shall tell you willingly what Hugh's commands were, but you must bear with me first until I tell you what my plans have been for you all these years."

He stopped and I fairly held my breath. What was he going to say next? This whole interview seemed so bizarre, so fantastic that I felt like pinching myself to make sure that it was a reality.

"My friend's is a nature that never changes," he continued, "and when I realized that, unless he could win you, he never would have a wife, I resolved that if possible I would cause a breach between you and your husband."

I stared at him in amazement. He was telling me this astounding thing as calmly as if he were expressing a preference for rolls rather than toast for breakfast.

"This surprises you," he said, with his mirthless smile again in evidence. "Then, I wonder what you will say when I tell you that this was the reason underlying my appeal to you for help, when we pusured our search for Hugh and rescued him from his intended murderers—for they would have been that if we had not come in time."

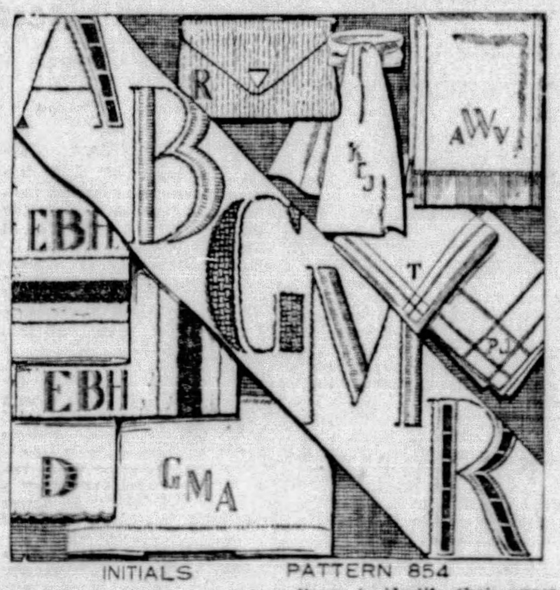
NEEDLEWORK DESIGNS



Formerly initials were put on linens to identify their owner. Today we use them as a decoration and a most striking one at that. But we are not satisfied to stop at our linens. We know that so lovely a design would add a smart touch to our accessories too. Here is your chance then to add a personal touch to a man's muffler, handkerchief or shirt pocket, or to brighten up your own scarf and purse. These initials may be embroidered in a variety of ways—in cutwork, satin stitch or in a simple weaving stitch, that is a quick way of getting a color effect. By doing the thin lines in black or a darker shade of the color used, a shaded effect is gotten. The initials come in three sizes, making it possible to combine the different sizes into a monogram.

Pattern 854 comes to you with a transfer pattern of one complete 2 inch alphabet, two 1½ inch alphabets, and two ¾ inch ones; detailed directions for embroidering them in different ways; illustrations of all stitches used; suggestions for arranging letters and correct placing on various linens.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) for this pattern to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York, N. Y.

For the "something old" every bride must have—as well as something new, something borrowed and something blue—a bride of today will carry a dainty handkerchief which is 150 years old.

MISS ELIZABETH JENKINS

This fragile bit of val lace on a silk homespun backing belonged to the bride's great-great grandmother.

The bride is Priscilla Barnes, daughter of the G. Webber Barneses, who'll wed Carl H. Schusler, son of Mrs. Henry Schusler, this afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Episcopal Church of the Ascension.

Officiating will be the rector, the Rev. Dr. H. Boyd Edwards.

The bride will wear eggshell satin with the yoke and sleeves of lace. The long train of satin will fall from the waistline.

Her all rose-pointe lace veil will cascade from a coronet of the lace. She'll carry a traditional bridal bouquet.

Maid of Honor In Satin Crepe

Her maid of honor, tall, brunette Elizabeth Jenkins, will have a gown of beige satin crepe. With it she'll wear a brown velvet beret-type hat and brown accessories.

And her skirt will be slit—in keeping with the latest word in fashion—and will have a slight train. The neckline will be high, the sleeves, long and fitted.

Dahlias in autumnal shades will form her bouquet.

A peach frock with a matching hat will be the costume of the little flower girl—Nancy Schusler, daughter of the Howard Schuslers, and a niece of the bridegroom.

She's to carry a Colonial bouquet.

Mother to Wear Beige Chiffon

Mrs. Barnes, mother of the bride, will appear in beige chiffon and lace with brown accessories, and Mrs. Schusler in periwinkle blue lace with matching accessories.

William McQuillen will be best man, and Robert Munroe, Joseph Pontefract, Howard Schusler, Robert Miller, Benjamin Jarrett, all of Pittsburgh, and John Bookwalter, of Cleveland, formerly of Pittsburgh, will be ushers.

After an eastern motor tour, Mr. Schusler and his bride will be at home in the Netherlands Apartments.

The reception at the Barnes home following the wedding is to be for only the bridal party, the families and out-of-town guests.

Dr. Cosentino Will Return To College

Dr. Santina Cosentino is returning this week to Marygrove College, Detroit, Mich., where, since last year, she has held the position of professor of romance languages and literature.

Dr. Cosentino, a former instructor at the University of Pittsburgh, received her Ph. D. degree there in June.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

Do You Like to Visit the Highland Park and Zoo and Why?

That's this week's contest subject, fellows.

Your letters have been flying into Junior Patrol headquarters here but there's still plenty of time for hundreds more.

Remember the rules — your letter shouldn't be more than 100 words long and you have to be a Junior Patrol member to compete. If you're not a member now, send along your signed up pledge right away. You don't have to cut it out of the paper—a copy will do just as well.

Probably you all have heard about the terrible fire that destroyed the big ocean liner as it was nearing New York a few days ago. Many people were burned and many others drowned when they had to jump into the sea, some of them without lifebelts.

It goes to show, fellows, that man has some things to learn yet about almost everything. The Morro Castle was a fine big ship—built only a few years ago. Everybody thought it was just about as safe as a ship could be.

Maybe some day they will be able to build a boat that is completely fireproof. Why not figure it out yourselves, fellows? One way to start is to read everything you can about boats. You'll find lots of books and magazines in the library.

This letter is from Nancy Fiso, of 5239 Butler street, Pittsburgh.

She says:

"If I had a hundred dollars I would give half to the crippled home for food and clothes. If a blind man came I would give him a dollar or two to buy food or to go to a doctor and get his eyes fixed so he could see the world. With five dollars I'd buy two dresses for each of my two sisters and let them have a dollar for anything they want to buy."

Miss Bradley Married in Bellevue

There was a wedding last night in the United Presbyterian Church, Bellevue, at 8:30 o'clock when Miss Marian Dyer Bradley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Bradley, of Balph avenue, Bellevue, became the bride of James Wilson Crawford, son of James S. Crawford, of South Lexington avenue.

There was a reception in the Highland Country Club after the ceremony, and later Mr. Crawford and his bride left for Bermuda and will reside in Walnut street when they return.

Mrs. Harvey S. McMillin was her sister's matron of honor; Miss Virginia Crawford, the maid of honor and Mrs. Fred G. Campbell, of Chicago, was the bridesmaid.

Elmer Porter Sereno, of Philadelphia, former classmate of the bridegroom, at Princeton, was best man. Ushers included another classmate, Dr. John A. Lichty, Jr., of Rochester, N. Y.; Robert D. Ferguson, Harvey S. McMillin, J. Randall Thomas.

Out-of-town guests at the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Smith, Cleveland, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Flannery, Boston; Mrs. John A. Lichty, Rochester; Mr. and Mrs. William Minary, Tyrone, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Roy A. Vance, Akron; Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Carspecken, of Morgantown, W. Va.

Pre-nuptial entertainments included the bachelor dinner given by the bridegroom Wednesday in the H. Y. P. Club and the rehearsal dinner Thursday night, given by James Crawford.

Miss Thomas Ends Visit to Relative

Miss Anne Elizabeth Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Edward Thomas, of Pasadena, Cal., formerly of Johnstown and Philadelphia, who has been the house guest of her grandfather, L. V. Martindell, at Lindenhurst, near Beallsville, Pa., left Wednesday for Philadelphia to be the guest of friends. She will go on to New York and will enter Vassar September 20.

Goucher Club Will Give Tea

The Goucher College Club of Pittsburgh will begin its fall activities next Saturday afternoon by giving a tea for new members at the home of the president, Mrs. A. H. Parlett, Lincoln avenue, Bellevue. Mrs. Charles Wellons and Mrs. Edwin Ramsey will assist the hostess.

Club Head Guest of Honor

Mrs. T. R. Watts, president of the Crescent Hill Women's Club, will be honor guest at the club tea in Mrs. Colin K. Lee's home Tuesday afternoon. A number of other good things are promised the members for this year—a fashion show, a trip to the International Art Exhibit, a covered dish dinner, an address by the Rev. Dr. John Ray Ewers, a talk on "Laws Affecting Women," by Attorney Ella Grauibart, and "Crescent Hill Brevities," the last in February.

Mrs. Elsie McFate will give a garden talk and Miss Karen Fladoes will have "Culinary Short Cuts" as her topic and at the closing meeting the Forest Hills Choral, under the direction of Mrs. B. O. Austin, will give a recital preceding a card party.

The annual party for club husbands is to be an early spring event. Mrs. Watts' cabinet includes Mrs. G. E. Heberlein, vice president; Mrs. T. R. Ringness, secretary; Mrs. J. I. Hommell, treasurer, and Mrs. Donald C. West, parliamentarian.

Reception For Congress Directors

The reception of new members of the board of directors of the Congress of Clubs, which was held in the club house yesterday, formally opened the season's activities at the Penn avenue clubhouse. The social-hospitality committee, with Mrs. Samuel Brown as chairman, worked diligently all morning arranging the beautiful garden flowers in the lounge, dining rooms and auditorium. About 200 Congress members and presidents of affiliated clubs welcomed the new officers and directors and then proceeded to the auditorium for the program at 3 o'clock. Elsie Breese Mitchell, music chairman, presented Percy A. Dorrington, baritone, who gave a number of delightful solos, accompanied by Edward Kountz.

Mrs. Oliver J. Haller, president of the Congress, after a few words of welcome to the guests, told briefly of the work of Freeman H. Hammond, dramatic reader, who appeared later on the program. Mr. Hammond's first group was a series of monologues, in which he was accompanied by Mrs. C. Warren Kinder. His second number was a character sketch of Uncle Jed from "Shavings."

Mrs. Haller and Mrs. T. M. Stahlman, junior past president, presided first at the tea table, later being relieved by Mrs. Ralph W. Johnston and Mrs. John S. Sloan, who are also past presidents.

School Group To Meet on Tuesday

Wilkinsburg Junior High School Parent-Teacher Association will feature "Back to School Night," Tuesday at 7:30 o'clock.

Parents will go to the report rooms of their children, where they will receive Tuesday's schedule cards. Gongs will sound at intervals of 10 minutes to mark class changes, and by following the schedule, parents will meet every teacher their children had during that day.

At 9:15 everyone will assemble in the auditorium where Mrs. H. W. Daugherty, president, will preside at a brief business session. R. E. Beaton, principal; H. M. Harper, vice principal, and Miss Elizabeth Clugston, dean of girls, will speak.

A social hour will follow in which the hospitality committee, Mrs. E. J. Lewis, chairman, will serve refreshments.

Alumnae Group Will Have Meeting

The activities of the Pittsburgh Alumnae Association of Kappa Delta will be resumed at the College Club next Saturday. There will be a business meeting, tea and bridge.

New officers for the year are: Miss Catherine Dick, president; Miss Lucille O'Donnel, vice president; Miss Sue Bryson, recording secretary; Mrs. J. W. Crane Remaley, corresponding secretary; Miss Jean Carter, treasurer; Mrs. Clyde P. Bailey, Pan-Hellenic representative, and Miss Margaret Adams, editor.

Fox Chapel Classes to Be Open

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

When the Fox Chapel Garden Club has its annual fall flower show next Wednesday, it will, for the first time, open four classes of entries to non-members in the community. These four classes are garden flowers, marigolds in stone jars, fruits and vegetables and gourds. And, incidentally, everyone seems to have gone quite gourd-minded, and, as one of the members expressed it, "they are raising the funniest looking things you have ever seen."

The members will exhibit in five specimen classes and six arrangement classes, as well as in the four already mentioned. And the exhibit, in order to make it very much more of a community affair than ever before, will take place in the little Fox Chapel Church in Fox Chapel road. Mrs. Francis R. Harbison is chairman of the general committee.

Assisting her are Mrs. H. W. Dunlap, Mrs. Edward C. Leslie, Mrs. Dean Wilson and Mrs. E. W. Wilson. Judges are Mrs. B. W. Dunham and Mrs. J. H. Caldwell, of Oakmont, and Mrs. Alexander H. Hunter, of Sewickley.

Sale Planned By O. E. S. Group

Golden Triangle Chapter, No. 474, Order of the Eastern Star will have a rummage sale at 1205 Carson street, next Saturday. Mrs. Lida Eskey is worthy matron of the chapter.

Adah Chapter No. 54, of the Eastern Star, has planned a luncheon and card party at the Rosenbaum Home Arts Studio on Wednesday. Mrs. Anna K. Reid, worthy matron, is among the aides to Mrs. Grace Hill, chairman.

Mrs. Duane L. Taylor, Mrs. Charles A. Hedges and Mrs. James Bell will accompany Mrs. David Timothy, president of Pittsburgh Assembly No. 47, Social Order of the Beauceant, to Oklahoma City, for the supreme assembly of the Order September 26 to 28. On the return trip the party will stop over at the Century of Progress Exposition.

Catholic Body Will Hold Social

Court Allegheny Catholic Daughters of America will entertain members of Court Canonsburg at a social and luncheon on Tuesday evening in the Allegheny Council Knights of Columbus clubhouse. Mrs. Stella Scanlon, general chairman, is assisted by members whose last names begin with the letter "S."

Court Allegheny's bowling league will resume regular meetings on Monday evening at the Federal alleys. Miss Dolores Huber is president and Miss Henrietta Chisler, secretary-treasurer.

Morrison Alumnae To Have Luncheon

Next Saturday afternoon the Margaret Morrison Alumnae Association of Carnegie Institute of Technology will open its year's program with a luncheon in the College Club.

Mrs. H. J. Graham is chairman of the event. There's to be a pageant entitled "Glimpses of the Past," in which members will appear dressed in the period of their graduation.

Olga Bernstein Goes To Northwestern

Miss Olga A. Bernstein, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. H. Bernstein, left yesterday for Evanston, Ill., where she will study at Northwestern University. She was accompanied by her parents.

Erie Girl to Wed East End Man

Miss Ethel Shirley Levick, daughter of Mrs. Ida Levick, of Erie, Pa., has chosen October 7 as the date for her marriage to Charles Shapira, of Stanton avenue.

Announce Dance At Country Club

The Edgewood Country Club announces a dance the evening of September 22, to be held in the clubhouse.

Marian C. Jones Bride Of John F. Marshall

MRS. JOHN F. MARSHALL

Mrs. John F. Marshall is the former Miss Marian C. Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Paul Jones, of the Penn-Albert Hotel Apartments, Greensburg.

Her marriage to the son of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Marshall, of Lock Haven, Pa., took place Monday in the Most Holy Sacrament Church, Greensburg. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall are at home in Lock Haven.

Alumnae To Hold Bridge Luncheon

The alumnae chapter of Omicron Gamma of Chi Omega will hold a bridge luncheon today in Kaufmann's private dining room.

SPENDTHRIFTS!

World-Champion Pinch-Penny Title Wrested Away From the Scots

Residents of the town Gabrovo, Bulgaria, have long been celebrated for their frugality, but as a result of a money-saving trick recently employed by this family, Gabrovian stinginess has now attained a fame that makes all close-fisted Scots seem like spendthrifts.

James J. Long's Sports Comment

THE TASK OF Rainbow and Skipper Harold S. Vanderbilt in the fifteenth defense of the America's Cup is the hardest that ever confronted American yachts and yachtsmen in this country's 83 years of trophy possession, during which Uncle Sam's defending craft won every one of 14 series and lost only three races in a total of 36. Unquestionably, England's Endeavour is the best and fastest challenger yet sent across, she has a capable skipper in Owner T. O. M. Sopwith, and the combination represents a serious cup-lifting threat.

H. S. Vanderbilt

Americans realize that the trophy never before was in such grave danger, and that victory for Rainbow can come, if it all, only after the closest and hardest-fought races on record.

Big Year for British

COME TO THINK of it, 1934 has been a big year for the British in competition with the United States. They turned back our tennis team in the challenge for the Davis Cup. Fred Perry won our national championship at the nets for the second successive time and also cleaned up at Wimbledon, England's first triumph in singles there in almost a quarter century. Dorothy Round defeated Helen Jacobs in the same tourney.

Henry Cotton won the British open in golf, which Americans had taken annually since 1924. Jack Lovelock defeated Bill Bonthron in two out of three races. Oxford and Cambridge vanquished Princeton and Cornell in track, and English oarsmen swept the river against the best American crews at Henley. The only prize carried off by America was the British amateur golf crown, won by Lawson Little, favorite over David Goldman in today's final for the United States amateur title. Sopwith may find some hope in that record.

Ryan to Stay on Job

LAST YEAR IT was an operation for appendicitis that kept Johnny Vergez out of the closing pennant games and the World Series. This year it is Blondy Ryan who probably will keep him on the bench. Manager Terry may have intended it as only a temporary shift when he lifted Vergez after the second game of the Pirate series this week and sent Ryan to third base, but by reason of the improved spirit of the Giants since that day, it is now said Terry plans to keep Ryan on the job for the remainder of the season and also for the October derby.

Blondy Ryan

It is believed that Vergez is done as a Giant, and that Terry will try to get Dick Bartell from the Phils for the shortstop post in 1935, with the idea of shifting Travis Jackson to third base, though the Giants already have bought a shortstop in Billy Myers.

Gridders Wear Shorts

FOOTBALL PLAYERS AT the University of California are going in for shorts and the backs will wear them in the opening game of the schedule. Fandom is wondering how long the Bears will stick to that style of attire, for while shorts have been retained in soccer and rugby, they have not been able to survive on the gridiron.

Shorts are not new to football. McGill and other Canadian teams used to wear them but now prefer the United States style of pants, because of all-around utility.

McLarnin Still Liked

IT IS POSSIBLE that when Barney Ross and Jimmy McLarnin enter the ring in Long Island City tonight for their thrice postponed welterweight title fight, Ross will show that he has been harmed less than his opponent by the nine days of delay. For the dual champion didn't have to bother about keeping below the 147-pound limit. Light exercise was enough for him. But McLarnin, to remain under 147, has been required to keep going at a pretty stiff training pace, and therefore has been subjected to a greater risk of becoming stale. For all that, unless he is through as a fighter, Jimmy still looks from this distance like the probable winner by reason of his weight advantage, far greater punching power and the improvement which the May fight may have brought.

LITTLE LEADS GOLDMAN IN GOLF FINAL

BROOKLINE, Mass., Sept. 15.—(AP.)—W. Lawson Little, Jr., of San Francisco, holder of the British amateur title, won the ninth to become 1 up on David (Spec) Goldman, of Dallas, in a close, exciting match today for the United States Amateur golf championship over the 36-hole route. The match in detail:

First Hole, 445 Yards, Par 4

Little, boomed a 280-yard drive down the middle, while Goldman was 30 yards shorter and at the edge of the fairway, but the Texan banged a beautiful No. 1 iron to within five feet of the cup and dropped the putt for a birdie 3 to become 1 up as the crowd gave him a big cheer. Little, using a No. 4 iron, was 15 feet beyond the pin, and putted short.

Second Hole, 360 Yds. Par 4

Little's drive was about 50 yards short of the green and he overplayed his approach, the ball rolling to the back of the green, 25 feet from the pin. The Californian was conceded a 4 after rolling his putt within a foot of the cup for a 4. Goldman's drive had caught the rough and he half-topped his second. His third was still short of the green and his chip stopped a few feet from the pin for a 5.

Third Hole, 445 Yards, Par 4

Both hit good tee shots and reached the front edge of the green with irons. Goldman was a few feet inside, but Little ran his approach putt from 20 feet close to the hole and the Texan did the same for a half in 4s.

Fourth Hole, 305 Yards, Par 4

Little took the lead with a birdie 3. After another fine drive, he hit a niblick shot that stopped four feet to the right of the cup, and sank the putt. Goldman was on with his approach 25 feet away, and his putt missed by only a foot.

Fifth Hole, 425 Yards, Par 4

Little was off the line for the first time with his tee shot, pushing slightly to the rough from where he played a No. 3 iron to the green, 15 feet to the right of the pin. Goldman was home, six feet from the hole, with a fine drive and No. 4 iron. Spec dropped his putt for a birdie after Lawson missed, and they were all square again.

Sixth Hole, 290 Yards, Par 4

Little fired a magnificent tee shot that stopped five yards short of the green, in a perfect spot, while Goldman hooked wildly to the rough and was 80 yards short. The Californian failed to take advantage of his opportunity, chipping 15 feet past the cup and taking two putts for a half in 4s as Spec pitched on neatly from a bad lie and also two-putted.

Seventh Hole, 185 Yards, Par 3

Both failed to reach the green from the tee, Goldman's shot fading to the rough and Little's dropping short. Spec chipped on, 15 feet from the cup, but his first putt partially stymied Little, who had chipped eight feet from the pin, and it was a half in 4s. They now were all even with par as well as each other.

Eighth Hole, 375 Yards, Par 4

Goldman pushed his tee shot to the rough and his approach barely reached the front of the green. Little pitched 35 feet to the left of the pin and putted to the edge of the cup while Spec got down a three-footer finally for another half in 4s.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 15.—Idle for two days, the Pirates and Phillies will attempt a doubleheader this afternoon. In the event of dry weather the Traynor and Wilson clans expect to run off four games today and tomorrow, the dual bills being the result of Thursday's cancellation and yesterday's rain postponement.

Larry French and Waite Hoyt are ready to tackle the Baker Bowl boys in their own backyard this afternoon. The Buccos expect to face the slants of Chief Euel Moore and Curt Davis.

The Pittsburgh athletes saw the Braves gain some fourth place ground yesterday as the Tribe defeated the Reds. The McKechnie clan now owns a lead of two and one-half games.

Pie Traynor and his crew, nevertheless, have not given up their hopes of finishing in the first division. The Buccos figure they may get back in the stride which marked their play in the recent winning streak of seven games, which was snapped by the Giants.

After finishing up with the Quakers tomorrow, the Pirates will hustle back to Greater New York, where on Monday they will open a four-game series with the Brooklyn Dodgers. This will be their last series of the Eastern invasion.

Inter-Club Tenpin League Is Formed

Although the Pittsburgh Athletic Association and Guyasuta Club representatives failed to show up at a meeting held at the North Side Elks' club last night, the Inter-Club Tenpin League finally was formed. Eight teams make up the loop.

The league will open its season on Wednesday, October 3. Members of the league are the Guyasuta Club, the Keystone Athletic Club, Carrick Eagles, North Side Elgs No. 1 and No. 2, Allegheny Social Club and Chartiers Heights Country Club.

Officers will be elected at a meeting to be held next Thursday night.

Metcalfe Stars, U. S. Trackers Lead

OSAKA, Japan, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—America's invading track athletes held a scant three-point lead today over Japan at the end of the first half of a two-day meet here.

Led by the brilliant 100-meter dash of Ralph Metcalfe, who equaled the word record of 10.3, the United States team piled up 36.5 points to Japan's 33.5.

Supremacy in the field events enabled the Japanese to keep an almost even pace with the Americans who captured every race except the relay, which was ruled out because both teams fouled.

GAME POSTPONED

The playoff game for the second half championship of the North Side Twilight League between Fineview and Ingomar, scheduled last evening, was postponed and will be played at Wilson Park, a neutral field, tomorrow afternoon.

SCHOOL TEAMS CLASH TODAY

By JULIUS LEVIN

Three members of the class AA ranks of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League usher in their football programs today against class B opponents. Jeannette, coached by E. Markley Barnes and which was in the running for the championship until it ran afoul Greensburg last Thanksgiving Day, opens its campaign against Sewickley Township at Jeannette. McKeesport begins its drive against Glassport, always a tough opponent for the Tubers, and Turtle Creek Union pries off with Trafford.

The McKeesport-Glassport game marks the return of Bill Sullivan as coach of the Tubers. Sullivan enjoyed unusual success prior to relinquishing the reins to Bill Cless last fall, and McKeesport fans are expecting him to have another winning eleven.

The class A program is headed by the Duquesne-Crafton game at Crafton. Other attractive openers find Monaca at Ambridge, Aliquippa at Butler, Ligonier at Ramsay, and Union Township at Ellwood City.

A fairly hefty program of scholastic tussels were staged yesterday afternoon and evening. In a feature engagement, Braddock bowed to New Castle, 13 to 0, in a game played under the lights at New Castle. The victors tallied in the first and final periods.

In other games, Homestead won over Pitcairn, 20-0; East Pittsburgh defeated South Fayette, 6-0; Scott High, of North Braddock, walloped Munhall, 34-0; Justins downed St. Mary's, 13-6; Central Catholic nosed out Sewickley, 7-0; Freeport tied Washington Township, 0-0, and Redstone beat South Union, 13 to 9.

Petrolia Defeated In N. B. F. Tourney

YOUNGSTOWN, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Cleveland eliminated Petrolia, Pa., from the National Baseball Federation tournament, 1 to 0, and won the right to meet Birmingham, Ala., in the championship series starting today.

Cleveland's winning run was made in the first inning. The score by innings:

Batteries—Schamp and Heiden; Smith and Evans.

MR. AND MRS. T. O. M. SOPWITH, ENDEAVOUR'S PILOTS

The colorful races for the America's yachting cup got under way off Newport, R. I., today to continue until one of the yachts has won four races. Mr. Sopwith, the challenger, is a wealthy Englishman following in the footsteps of the late Sir Thomas Lipton, the perennial challenger, and gracious loser. These are International News Photograph Service pictures.

LOCAL NINES CLASH

The Pittsburgh Crawfords and the Homestead Grays are scheduled to clash this evening at Greenlee Field in the fourth game of their series. The Grays have won two and the Crawfords one to date. The game is booked to get under way at 5:15 o'clock.

ROSS, M'LARNIN GO THREATENED

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Hoping for the best but fearful of another knockout blow by the weather man, fight fans fumbled around today in the pockets of suits they wore last week to find their tickets for Barney Ross' welterweight title defense against Jimmy McLarnin.

They hoped, and so did the principals and the promoters, that the 15-round title battle could be put on, as scheduled, in Madison Square Garden bowl tonight but rain, which forced three successive postponements of the fight originally slated to be held September 6, was a distinct threat once more.

Neither Champion Barney nor the hard-hitting Irishman he dethroned last May appear to have lost anything by the long delay. McLarnin, especially, has put in a full week of impressive workouts. So good has the Irishman looked, as a matter of fact, that the odds have dropped from 9 to 5, to 6 to 5 with the champion still favored. Ross, likewise, seems to have held the fine edge of condition remarkably well and a close duel is in prospect.

Local Boxing Men At Tonight's Fight

Having arranged to get Monday nights for his boxing shows in Duquesne Garden, starting off with a Lou Brouillard-Tait Littman match on October 1, Promoter Jules Beck left last night for New York to attend the Barney Ross-Jimmy McLarnin fight tonight and also look over some talent.

Other district boxing men at the fight are Teddy Yarosz, the new middleweight champion, and his manager, Ray Foutts, along with Bus Vogel, matchmaker of the Yarosz-Vince Dundee battle.

HEAVY WEATHER MAY GIVE U. S. BOAT EDGE

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 15.—(AP.)—As calmly deliberate as two surgeons approaching a critical operation, Harold S. Vanderbilt, skipper of the Rainbow, defender of the America's Cup, and T. O. M. Sopwith, skipper of the British challenger, Endeavour, faced today the first race in the series which will determine the possession of the famous trophy.

Neither would make any claim to victory in advance. Each subscribed to:

"May the best man win."

The weatherman, who may have much to do with the affair, held forth the prospect of rain with occasional squalls. Most observers have been of the opinion heavy weather would favor Rainbow and light weather Endeavour.

The day of the opening race dawned with Newport Harbor crowded with almost every manner of craft, and many excursion vessels were yet to reach here. Most in many years, if ever, have so many millions of dollars in floating palaces assembled in one anchorage.

At morning colors, 21 guns shattered the quiet, in salute to President Roosevelt, here to attend the races aboard Vincent Astor's private yacht, Nourmahal.

YACHTS ARE READY

Both yachts have been carefully prepared for the starting gun and thus crews drilled to high points in efficiency, although it was generally believed if Rainbow held any advantage, it would be found in the men who worked her sails and rigging.

Rainbow's crew has received the admiration of everyone, including Sopwith. Two-thirds of Endeavour's crew are amateurs, recruited after she lost most of her paid hands when they struck for higher wages.

Sopwith's challenge is the fifteenth since the schooner America lifted the famous trophy in 1851. Endeavour's 14 predecessors have had no luck whatever against the American defenders.

Both yachts, tuned to their greatest point of sailing efficiency, were put under sail yesterday, sporting about the cup course, nine miles Southeast of Brenton's reef lightship, with Weetamoe, unsuccessful contender for defense nomination, and Vanitie, old and ineligible cup boat. Little could be learned in advance of the potential speed of the rivals through observing their performances, for close contests were avoided.

VANDERBILT AT HELM

Vanderbilt was at Rainbow's wheel, but Sopwith, the British challenger, entrusted the big blue invader to other hands among his after guard. Sopwith, probably for the first time, observed Endeavour's behavior from a vantage point other than her deck. He followed her aboard his big private yacht, the Vita.

Sopwith's bid for the America's Cup continues to engender only the friendliest sort of rivalry. Gerard Lambert, owner and skipper of Vanitie, who furnished the "old girl" as trial horse to both the American Cup candidates and Endeavour, today will serve as skipper aboard Vita. This will release Vita's master, Capt. Donald McKillop, a very burry Scot, and he will doff his stripes to serve as an ordinary hand on Endeavour.

Races are to be sailed daily, except Sundays, until one craft has won four. The start may come as early as 10:40 (eastern standard time) a. m., each day, although wind and weather conditions may cause delay.

Outboard Racers Open Regatta Today

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—A bunch of fellows with speed in their blood and trim racing craft under them give time and the Schuylkill river's tides a battering today as they open the National Outboard Motorboat championships for a three-day stand.

The professionals have their innings today. Outstanding in the pro competition are the four drivers defending the title they won a year ago—Bob Meyer, of Chicago, in class A; Frank Vincent, one of Tulsa, Oklahoma's racing brothers, in B; Jim Rogers, Melrose Park, Ill., in C, and Walter Everett, of Tulsa, in D.

Pittsburgh is represented by Jimmy Altman, an amateur, who has turned in a good record for the season to date.

Facts on Cup Races

Who's Who, What's What and Other Information on Yachting Classic

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 15.—(AP.)—The what and when and who's who of the America's Cup races:

Trophy—A tall silver cup won in English waters in 1851 by the American schooner America. Presented to the New York Yacht Club as a perpetual yachting trophy.

Contestants—T. O. M. Sopwith's Endeavour, Great Britain, fifteenth challenger; United States Syndicate's Rainbow, defender.

Skippers—Sopworth, Harold S. Vanderbilt.

Number of races—Four out of seven. First race today; remaining races every weekday, weather permitting, until one yacht has won four; each skipper may request a day's rest between races.

Point of start—Nine miles south of Brenton Reef Lightship, Newport.

Time of start—Warning signal at 10:30 a. m. (eastern standard time) daily; start 10:40 a. m. No race shall start after 12:30 p. m.

Distance and courses—Each race 30 miles, first to be windward-leeward, 15 miles each leg, second triangular, 10 miles each leg, then alternated each succeeding day.

Time limit—Five and one-half hours.

Each contestant's record—Endeavour: Against two or more rivals, eight firsts, three seconds, one fourth; against Velsheda, four firsts, one second. Rainbow: Sixteen firsts, seven seconds, two thirds, one fourth in match and group races against Yankee, Weetamoe and Vanitie.

Distinguishing marks, two contestants—Endeavour, blue hull and with JK4 on mainsail; Rainbow, white hull and with J4 on mainsail.

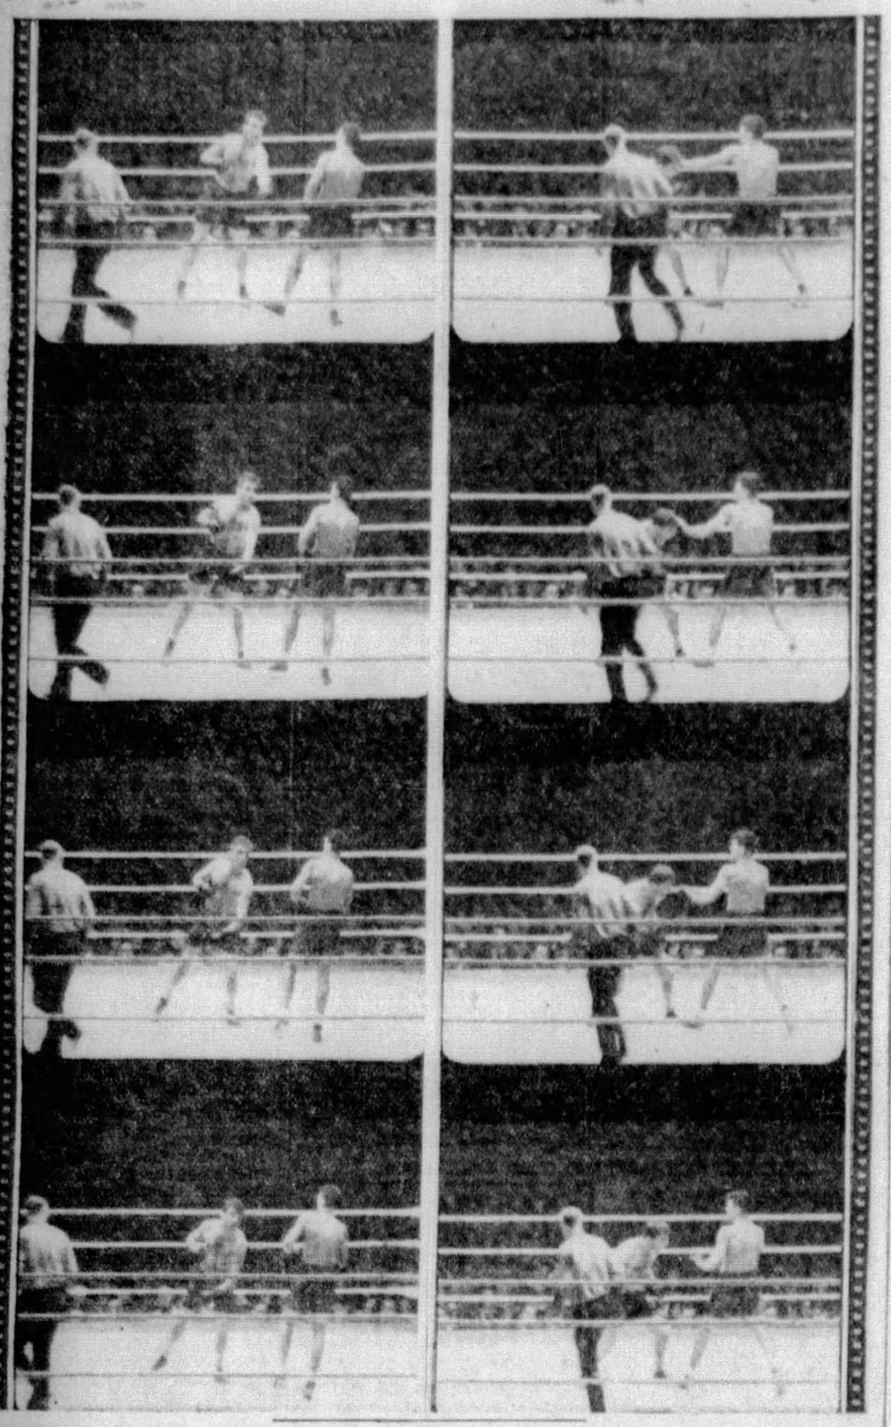
GIANTS, TIGERS INCREASE LEADS IN MAJOR RACES

'Yarosz Real Champ'–Movies



Who Says Dundee Won?—Not the Films

Ever since the Vince Dundee-Ted Yarosz fight at Forbes Field some of the fans who sat at various distances from the ring have contended that Yarosz really didn't have a winning margin at the finish of the 15 rounds and that Dundee should not have lost his world middleweight title.

Moving pictures now being shown at the Warner and other theaters throughout the tri-state area bring out Yarosz' superiority unmistably.

Yarosz won the fight backing up and jabbing and countering the pressing Dundee, who devoted more time to crowding than he did to punching. Al Grayber is the referee.—HARRY KECK.

CARDS' HOPES DIMMED BY SCHUMACHER

Associated Press.

A good many of the Giants' worries about the St. Louis threat have disappeared, banished by the strong right arm of young Hal Schumacher.

The husky young alumnus of St. Lawrence University returned the New York club to its place five and one-half games in front of the Cardinals yesterday with a 4-to-1 victory.

Schumacher limited the Cards to five hits and a single unearned run, allowed only two runners to reach third and smacked his sixth home run of the season to help bring about the downfall of Bill Walker.

The Detroit Tigers also took a long step toward clinching their pennant when they gained a full game on the Yankees to make it a four and one-half-game margin. In a 12-inning thriller, the Tigers turned back Washington, 6 to 4, while the Yanks absorbed a 12-to-5 beating from the Indians.

Wes Ferrell's first inning wildness forced in a run for the White Sox and gave them a 1-to-0 victory over Boston behind Milt Gaston. The Browns and Athletics divided a doubleheader notable principally because Buck Newsom started both games for St. Louis. He left the first after walking the first four men and the A's won, 9-7. St. Louis came back with a 5-to-2 victory.

The Boston Braves conquered an old "jinx" pitcher, Si Johnson, to beat the Reds, 4 to 2.

19 MAY START IN FUTURITY

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—The world's richest horse race, the $100,000 Futurity, will be renewed at Belmont Park today with the three B's—Bradley, Brookmeade and Belair—favored to take home the major share of the big purse dangling six and one-half furlongs down the Widener straightaway.

Nineteen two-year-olds, survisors of an original field of 1,415 juveniles named either before they were foaled or as yearlings, have been selected to start in the forty-fifth running of the race that will net the winner more than $80,000. The youngsters will parade to the post before an expected crowd of 30,000.

Although many, including all of the pre-race favorites, have been entered, the contest figures to be strictly one between E. R. Bradley's Balladier and Boxthorn, Psychic Bid and Special Agent from Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Brookmeade stable and Omaha, of William Woodward's Belair stud. The others, with the possible exception of Mrs. Payne Whitney's Flat Eye, are given only outside chances.

The probable starters, weights and owners, follow:

Horse.	Weight.	Owner.
Royal Command	117	Mrs. J. H. Whitney
Good Gamble	119	M. L. Schwartz
Balladier	122	E. R. Bradley

DAYTON LEADS IN SERIES

DAYTON, O., Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Dayton took a lead of two games to one over Zanesville in the Mid-Atlantic League's championship series last night, winning 2 to 1.

Due to poor base running, Dayton missed four chances to score and win by a convincing margin. The score:

LEAFS WIN AGAIN

TORONTO, Sept. 15.—The Toronto Maple Leafs annexed the fourth game of the International League playoff series here last night, defeating Newark, league pennant winners, 7 to 4. The fifth game of the series will be played here this afternoon.

Yesterday's game at Albany between Albany and Rochester was rained out and will be played tonight.

GAME POSTPONED

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Sept. 15.—The Binghamton-Williamsport, New York-Pa. League championship playoff game, scheduled for here last night, was postponed until today on account of rain. The fourth game of the series will be played at Williamsport tomorrow.

MEMORY TEST

TODAY'S QUESTIONS

How good is your memory of sports events, heroes and dates? Can you answer these questions?

1—Who was known as the "Peerless Leader" of baseball?

2—Name the two brothers who played against each other in a world series.

3—Who was the major league catcher who caught a ball dropped from the Washington Monument?

4—What were the scores of the Carnegie Tech-Notre Dame and Pitt-Notre Dame football games last year?

5—Against what heavyweight did Jack Sharkey have his greatest success?

(Answers in Want Ad Section Monday. See today's Want Ad Section for answers to yesterday's questions.)

CHILLYSAUCE

Jerome Dean's Springtime boast that he and his kid brother, Paul, would win as many as 45 games for the Cardinals this season was taken with a grain of salt by his readers, yet it seems that the two boys had the pepper to offset the salt. The brother act has landed 41 victories, including Paul's grand triumph over the Giants Thursday.

The older of the brothers has a card showing 25 triumphs as compared to the 16 victories credited Paul. They would seem to be a cinch to reach the 45 margin in view of the several opportunities each will have in the remaining two weeks of the season.

The triumphs of the pair are most unusual when it is considered that they have been living in a storm through much of the summer . . . At times they had their employes on the ropes, what with strikes, walkouts and other deviations from the paths of diamond righteousness . . . Well, anyhow, they got their names in the township papers and a few of the big city sheets.

With topnoich catchers "scarcer'n hen's teeth" it is interesting to note that two big backstoppers with Pittsburgh connections have been culled from the American Association . . . George Susce, the pride of Calico Hill in Lower Oakland, has been recalled by Detroit, and Bill Brenzel, a kid Pirate a couple of years back, is catching for the Cleveland Indians.

Late reports show Susce, former Schenley High School athlete, to be hitting better than .340, and fighting about twice that . . . Young Brenzel was off to a bad start in a Pirate uniform and was shunted back to the Coast League, but this year he was called the frontrank receiver of the American Association . . . Jimmy Crandall, son of Coach Otis Crandall, of the Pirates, has supplanted Brenzel at Kansas City.—CHILLY DOYLE.

CHARTIERS STAR GOLF CHAMP

The women's golf championship of Western Pennsylvania has passed into the care of a star member of the Chartiers Heights Country Club. Yesterday, Mrs. W. G. Boggs defeated Mrs. J. R. Price, Oakmont veteran, three times holder of the crown, 5 and 4, in the final round of this year's tourney over the Oakmont links.

Mrs. Boggs, a long hitter, was in great form. Not only did she outdrive her opponent, but her short game was well nigh perfect. Mrs. Price's play was erratic and she was often in trouble. Her work on the greens was not up to her usual standard.

In the consolation round, Miss Emilie Roseburgh, of Oakmont, defeated Miss Nancy Byers, of Allegheny, 3 and 2.

Mrs. A. S. Dayton and Dr. Walter Gregg won the low net prize in the annual mixed foursome event, staged in the afternoon, with a card of 86-10—76. In the second division, Mrs. F. M. Sloan and H. B. Charles, of Edgewood, led with a net 77.

The Credit Men's Association holds its second tournament of the season at Stanton Heights tomorrow.

Heavy Scrimmage Carded for Pitt

CAMP HAMILTON, Windber, Pa., Sept. 15.—Pitt's Panthers of the gridiron, who have been camping out here in the mountains for the past several days while Dr. Jock Sutherland and his staff of laboratory assistants are performing all sorts of experiments, are due to go under the X-ray for a couple of hours this morning.

On the surface it will just be a nice, friendly scrimmage between two groups of healthy youngsters who are good friends, but as a matter of fact, they will be the objects of as good a scrutiny as varsity squad that trained in this has even been focused on any place.

FIGHT RESULTS

At Hollywood, Cal.—Frank Rowsett defeated Pietro Georgi, 10 rounds.

At Minneapolis—Larry Udell and Pat Arnold drew, 6 rounds; Henry Schatt defeated Fred Atkinson, 6 rounds; Max Kalbrenner defeated Louis Walker, 4 rounds.

POLO OPENER POSTPONED

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—The first game of the second annual intersectional polo series, scheduled to be played at Meadow Brook Field today, was indefinitely postponed by officials of the United States Polo Association early today because of the condition of the field resulting from the overnight rains.

Officials said the game would not be played before Wednesday and an even later date may be set.

JENNINGS WINS TITLE

RYE, N. Y., Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Charles H. Jennings, of Roaring Gap, N. C., is the new national senior golf champion. His 36-hole total of 158, the result of an 80 on Tuesday and a 78 on Wednesday, withstood all assaults by the second division of the big field Thursday and yesterday. Jennings succeeds Raleigh W. Lee, of Columbus, O., as champion.

By HONUS WAGNER

To the Sports Editor:

Did I get razzed yesterday! I made a crack about Tilden and Vines being football players, and some people thought I didn't know any better. This young fellow Vines swings a wicked racket and if there weren't so many women in the same game he's in I'd say it was a pretty good game. I have nothing against tennis per se, as the lawyer fellow says. It is every bit as good as backgammon, and if you don't think backgammon is a swell game you don't know your sports. Can't you just picture 50,000 persons at the Polo Grounds watching a game of backgammon?

Gelbert Resigns As Grid Coach

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Charley Gelbert, former shortstop of the St. Louis Cardinals, has resigned as freshman football coach at Gettysburg College because of a two-year-old shotgun wound in his leg.

Gelbert told college officials his leg has not sufficiently healed to risk the rough and tumble of the football field. He added he hoped to go south with the Cards in the spring and is anxious to protect the injured member.

Gelbert was shot in a hunting accident near his home in Fayetteville, Franklin County.

Little Nearer Title

Bobby Jones Expects Californian to Win U. S. Amateur Crown Today.

By BOBBY JONES

(Only golfer ever to win both the U. S. and British amateur and open golf titles in one year.)

BROOKLINE, Mass., Sept. 15.—Lawson Little's move a step nearer the double amateur golf championship was not accomplished without some difficulty. Don Armstrong put up a great fight yesterday and made a match of it all the way. But, as he has done throughout the tournament, Little was able to meet every challenge with something a little bit better than the Illinois golfer could offer.

Bobby Jones

Armstrong made a discouraging start. Called upon to start sooner than he had expected, he was not thoroughly ready when they went to the first tee. Losing the first four holes, he spotted Little enough to carry him through. Yet Don, by a fine exhibition of spirit and ability, made up the entire deficit in the next five holes.

In the afternoon, Armstrong again got away badly, losing two of the first three. That made four down and we thought again that he was finished. But a chip out of a bunker at the twenty-second, and a great spoon shot at the twenty-third got those back. Again he tossed the ball back to Little by messing up the next and then he lost the short seventh to Little's great deuce. And so the tide surged.

Armstrong was never able to sustain a rally. Either by his own mistakes, or by Little's superb counter attack, he was foiled every time.

Goldman played well enough against Smith, Little's opponent today is a good swinger and he has a great putting stroke. But he will have to play better golf than he did yesterday to beat the California youngster. Little makes mistakes like everyone else, but, with his power, his putter, and his excellent temperament, he can be counted upon to stick close to fours.

PIRATES SET FOR REDSKINS

By TOM BIRKS

Cliff Battles and his Boston Redskins of the National Professional Football League are back in town again, and tomorrow they'll afford Luby DiMeolo's Pittsburgh Pirates their initial test of the National Pro League campaign.

Battles, the former West Virginia Wesleyan star, ran riot against the local pros here a year ago in a night game. This year, with the Pirate terminals guarded by a pair of steller wingmen in Muggsy Skladany, Pitt's All-America star of last year, and Ben Smith, a veteran pro performer, Battles' path may not be so easy.

President Art Rooney announced last night that he had refused an offer from the St. Louis Gunners for Johnny McNally, quarterback star. The Gunners offered $2,500 for the former Green Bay ace.

TENNIS FINALS ON TODAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Washed out by severe showers yesterday, the Allegheny Country Club invitation turf court tennis classic is slated to terminate on the Sewickley Heights lot today. Men's singles semi-final frays, wherein Berkeley Bell, the Texan playing out of New York, engages John McDiarmid, another Lone Star product, and Gilbert Hall, New Jersey veteran, meets Lefty Bryan, husky Tennesseean, were billed for 10:30 a. m., with the survivors clashing in the wind-up at 2 p. m. The doubles final, in which Bryan and McDiarmid, fifth ranking team in the nation, take on Bell and Hall, has been fixed for 4 o'clock.

Heroic efforts were made by contestants and committeemen to clean up the penultimate card in spite of the foul weather yesterday. It was determined to forego further effort to complete the singles section of the program and to switch the doubles semi-finals to the covered courts of the Pittsburgh Golf Club.

McDiarmid and Bryan defeated Frank Broida, local star, and Sam Gilpin, 7-5, 5-7, 4-6, 7-5, 6-0. In the other match played indoors, Bell and Hall routed Welsh and McGuffin, 6-1, 6-0, 6-1.

The Pittsburgh Country Club, through Tennis Chairman Don Anderson, has announced today its first invitation men's doubles net tournament to be staged on the two clay courts of the Beechwood boulevard organization next Saturday and Sunday, September 22 and 23. The event follows up an extensive schedule of exhibition play staged at the club over the period of the past two or three seasons.

More than 60 leading local netmen, including an especially large group from the East End area, have been invited to compete. Entries close next Wednesday evening. The draw will probably include about 16 teams.

STOCKS RESUME DOWNWARD TREND

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Yesterday's late selling was resumed, in part, in the early stock market trading today. However, a number of resistant spots appeared in the industrial list. Activity was moderate.

United States Steel preferred and Western Union each jumped around 2 points for new 1934 lows. United States Steel common, Bethlehem, American Commercial Alcohol and Union Pacific ruled fractionally lower, but steadying tendencies were shown by American Telephone, Santa Fe, du Pont and Goodyear.

Among the scattered signs of a little seasonal expansion in industry was a pickup in automobile production this week.

Cram's reports estimated automotive output for the week at 43,660 units, an increase of 5,394 over the preceding week, but 4,493 less than in the same week last year.

Indications were said to point to a September output of 170,000 cars and trucks in the United States and Canada, a decrease of about 14 per cent from September, 1933, and the first month since last January that output has fallen below 200,000 units.

Traders and brokers were relieved by the assurances of Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, that no hasty, ill-considered rules would be promulgated when federal control of the exchanges becomes fully effective October 1. He also disclosed the commission was considering liberalization of registration requirements under the national securities act.

Consumption of crude rubber in the United States last month, according to the Rubber Manufacturers' Association, was 25 per cent smaller than in the same month last year.

The British pound opened at $5.01, off ⅛ of a cent. French francs were off .00⅜ of a cent at 6.67¼ cents.

DU PONT SEEKS TO REGISTER

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. has sent a notice to stockholders informing them that the company has applied for temporary registration of its common and debenture stocks under the regulations of the Securities and Exchange Commisson, but that "the matter of permanent registration will not be decided until after the issuance of regulations applicable thereto by the commission.

Rules and regulations recently adopted by the commission provided for temporary registration of securities during the period ended June 30, 1935. Only registered securities will be dealt in on the New York Stock Exchange after October 1, 1934.

Regulations also provided that temporary registration may be terminated by the commission 90 days after the promulgation of rules for permanent registration or withdrawal by the corporation within 30 days after new regulations.

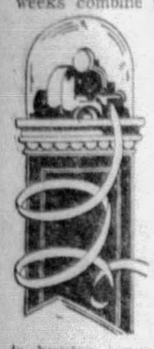
Traders Wary of Bull Side As Market Approaches July's Low Level



Technical implications of the movement of stocks in recent weeks combine with other uncertainties to make traders wary of the bull side of the market. The market is considered at a rather critical level. Recent selling brought it within easy distance of the late July low points. Deprived of inflation stimulants, the share list is dependent upon business developments to bring in buying support and the news from business quarters is not considered very nourishing.

The decline in United States Steel common and preferred to new low levels of the year this week affected sentiment in trading quarters appreciably. While United States Steel is no longer the market pivot it used to be, its action is still followed widely for indications of the general direction of the market. The bearish import of the action of steel was confirmed as other important issues sold into new low ground for the year. Consolidated Gas and Allied Chemical joined the old leader of the industrial shares in making new 1934 lows.

The July decline in stocks leveled out around the extreme lows touched last October on the autumn downswing. Consequently the October and July resistance level stood as the technical beacon for chart-readers at the moment. The market straightened out into a narrow rut early in the week after coming within a few points of another test of the October barrier. But evidence of a turn in the minor trend was lacking. Traders who watch the technical factors, rather than fundamental developments, for their market cues were waiting for stocks to get safely away from the July lows and for a rally to go far enough to break through the descending chart trend line before they espoused bullish views on the nearby outlook.

As far as the major trend of stock prices is concerned, the technicians who study the rhythms of price movements could discern no change in the upward direction outlined in the summer of 1932. The secondary trend, however, has been downward since last winter and since July, 1933, the market has been moving in a broad trading range, limited by the early February top and the late July lows. When either one of these levels is broken decisively, according to the theories of chartists, the next big move of the market will be signaled.

Various explanations were advanced by market commentators for the protracted inertia of the market, not the least being the approach of full federal control of security exchanges on October 1 and the ban on manipulation practices. The big question mark in the background is still inflation. The controversy over whether administration policies, as lately pursued, would lead eventually to currency inflation uses up much ink and paper and provides one of the chief topics of discussion in the financial district. Erstwhile prophets of inflation have not been so sure of their ground the past month for the Washington signs have been read in Wall street as meaning the administration was on "a sound money track."

The Bureau of Labor Statistics latest wholesale price index at 77.8 compares with 69.7 a year ago. Except for retail trade, however, the volume of business is well below last September, indicating that the gain in commodity prices in the meanwhile had not resulted entirely from growth of consumption and business expansion. Students of price movements assume that the price index in the meanwhile has been catching up on the depreciation in the dollar or, which amounts to the same thing, to the increase in the domestic price of gold. Moody's Investment Survey points out that industrial activity currently is about 12 per cent above the average for 1932, but as result of the decline since June is back about the levels of April, 1933, when recovery was just beginning to gather headway.

Erie Coal Dumpings Near Season's Low

CLEVELAND, Sept. 15.—Loadings of bituminous coal into vessels at Lake Erie docks during the past week fell to the smallest total for any week of the season since May 14, three weeks after the season opened.

In the week ended September 10, dumpings totaled 952,441 tons, compared with 1,277,762 in the week preceding and 1,089,471 in the like 1933 week.

For the season to September 10, loadings amounted to 24,341,607 tons, as against 20,864,909 a year ago and 13,940,482 tons two years ago.

Metropolitan Sets Insurance Record

NEW YORK, Sept. 15—During the first eight months of 1934 the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company passed the ten billion dollar mark in ordinary insurance in force, exclusive of group insurance, the first time that record has been attained by any life insurance company.

WALL STREET 'JITTERY' AS MARKET STAGNATES

UNCERTAINTIES ACCENTUATE PESSIMISM

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—The atmosphere in Wall street has shaded to about the deepest indigo of the post-1929 period.

This probably due more to the extreme stagnation of the securities business than to any other factor. Heavy prunning of expenses by Wall street houses in recent weeks has reduced employment in the financial community to a new low, and still many houses continue to run dismally in the red.

But the state of blue funk appears to have penetrated deeply into banking, as well. Talk in certain congressional quarters that the government may be forced to take over the functions of banking, now that the session of congress is only a few months away, is anything but conductive to Wall street's happiness. Indeed, James P. Warburg was moved to state in a public address this week that "the private banking system is on trial for its life. A decision will probably be reached during the coming winter."

COMPLETE 'BLUE FUNK'

All in all, Wall Street seems to have reached such a complete state of blue funk that a number of financial and business analyist have decided that it does not make sense, and their inquiries lead them to believe that the business of the country is better by several degrees than sentiment in the financial community, once supposed to be a fairly accurate barometer.

In fact, one well-known economist and investment manager returning to Wall Street this week after a tour of other business centers, bluntly concluded, "Wall Street has gone bughouse!"

But the mourning moguls of money find the scarcity of business, and uncertainty as to the future, hardly soothing to the nerves. Commercial bank credit, it is true, has started to expand. As a matter of fact, it has shown the most persistent expansion during the past several weeks of any time since the depression set in.

MAY FORECAST TURN

The securities market has been dammed up by uncertainties over the course of general business, after its more than seasonal summer slump, and the fact that marginal and trading regulations of the Securities and Exchange Commission, to take effect October 1, have yet to be announced.

So it is possible that the street may be approaching a turn toward resumption of its functions of financing business and industry. But almost everybody in Wall street these days seems to hail from Missouri.

Rarely has there been a time in the street when opinion regarding the outlook was so vague. Often opinion is confused, but these days many persons who were formerly almost certain to have decided convictions one way or the other, say they just don't know. The straggling optimists, however, think that once autumn business recovery becomes more apparent, the textile strike settled, and the October 1 stock exchange regulations digested, the financial community will find it has a new lease on life.

WORLD COPPER STOCKS CUT

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Stocks of copper in the United States and the Americas decreased 28,500,000 pounds while stocks outside of North and South America increased 15,000,000 pounds in August.

Production of copper from ores and secondary materials was 172,500,000 pounds.

Apparent consumption of copper in the United States was 61,000,000 pounds while abroad it was 155,500,000 pounds.

Declining Trend Noted in Lumber

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—During the holiday week ended September 8, says the National Lumber Manufacturers Association, lumber orders, shipments and production were below those of recent weeks, receding to low July levels. Production was 72,883,000 feet; shipments, 167,957,000 and orders 159,391,000.

Weekly Bank Clearings

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Reversing the down trend of the past four weeks, bank clearings rose to the highest level in over a month for the week ended September 12. The total for the 22 leading cities in the United States, as reported by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was $4,377,510,000, a gain of 5.5 per cent over the comparative figures of a year ago. This contrasted with a loss of 4.4 per cent for the week preceding. At New York City, clearings were $2,852,060,000, a reduction of only 0.2 per cent, while the aggregate for centers outside of New York of $1,525,450,000 was 18.1 per cent higher.

In the past three months only two weeks have shown an increase in bank clearings. Reductions were due almost wholly to the large losses at New York City, caused by unusual activity in stock dealings last year. The loss at New York the past week was trifling. All other cities reporting except Buffalo showed an increase. At many of these the gain continued notably large, as it has been for the greater part of the year to date. Banking operations for a long time in 1933 were so greatly curtailed that clearings at many points were exceptionally low. This week's total was larger than that of the preceding week by $862,241,000, whereas a year ago for the same two weeks the increase amounted to $470,940,000.

Figures at leading centers, showing increases and decreases compared with those of last year, are printed herewith; also daily bank clearings each month for the year to date:

Washington Not Likely To Hurry Inflation

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Despite current demands, which are expected to grow in intensity with the next session of Congress, guarded comments by responsible officials indicate that inflation of the type that creates distrust in the currency is not likely to develop in the near future.

Considerable pressure is now being exerted for that sort of "inflation" which would be reflected in higher prices and greater profits, but, it was pointed out, such an eventuality would be bound to be followed promptly by a wave of dissatisfaction. This, it was said, would come principally from buyers, possibly in the form of buyers' strikes, and from the many millions of persons who own insurance and bank deposits.

Further, it was said that industries could be expected to perform their traditional trends of overproducing in times of rising price levels, which would force the government to exercise its weapons to protect the consumer and at the same time adhere to conservative money and fiscal policies.

It appears that whatever inflationary policies are adopted, the process probably will be irregular and extended, manifesting itself in a series of ups and downs with the predominating influence being on the former.

The consensus of those not directly connected with whatever programs might be adopted is that such a series of cycles will continue for at least another year with the possibility they might continue even longer.

FEDERAL BONDS SELL LOWER

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Renewed pressure against United States government bonds forced the bond market down again today.

Trading, however, tapered off appreciably as the session progresed.

Bonds of the Federal Farm Mortgage and Home Owners Loan agencies were again the outstanding weak spots with losses running to 6-32 of a point.

Some Treasury support was apparent in the action of the Treasury 3¼s of 1946, which ruled moderately higher at 100.2.

Domestic corporation and railroad isues were weighed down by the poor tone in the governments. Second grade rails were particularly easy with Chicago and North Western convertible 4¾s off nearly a point.

In the medium priced division Southern Pacifics were again heavy.

Foreign governments were quiet and featureless.

TURN IN STEEL PRODUCTION NOTED

By B. E. V. LUTY

No improvement of strictly seasonal character has been seen in demand for steel, but there is heavier demand in some lines on account of stocks being largely exhausted.

The rate of steel production seems to have rounded a turn, as ingot output this week may be estimated at 21 per cent of capacity against 18 per cent last week, the decrease of two weeks being made up in one week. The official report of mill schedules last Monday showed an average of 20.9 per cent. The average rate in the first half of the year was 47.11 per cent.

Seasonal increase in steel demand is not expected unless there is seasonal improvement in business generally and if it does occur is likely to be slow coming as the policy of buyers is to delay as long as possible, whereas in active times wants were anticipated.

Increase in demand for steel is virtually certain because of exhaustion of stocks laid in last May and June on account of price considerations. The heaviest stocking was in bars, sheets and strips. Stocking of wire products was less extensive while in tubular goods the stocking was quite moderate on account of the consignment system by which nearly all the tonnage is handled.

PIPE DEMAND BETTER

Demand for tubular goods was insignificant early in July, but since then it has been increasing almost week by week, although no further improvement is reported this week. Demand for oil country goods is rather active. Demand for standard pipe relative to total steel demand is much greater than last year or year before, when standard pipe was especially dull. As there is virtually no building it appears that much repair work is being done, part of an accumulation of several years.

In the last two weeks wire products have shown greater increase in demand than any other finished steel line, as some indeed have had no discernible improvement. There was almost no demand for wire products until late in July and then volume fluctuated, increases overbalancing decreases.

Outside of the large centers jobbers' stocks of wire products are nearly exhausted. While buying is increasing, buying policies are on a very conservative basis. The Southeast was doing really well up to the time of the textile strike, which has had a somewhat dampening influence. The area has buying power on account of cotton and tobacco crops doing so well.

No more than slight improvement in demand is seen in sheets and strips and it is apparent that nearly all buyers who stocked still have some stocks. Since July 1 there has been buying by very small consumers who did not stock, and buying by large consumers in odd lots, to piece out. The slight increase in the latter class of buying indicates that some stocks are beginning to grow ragged.

While merchant bar business improved a trifle in August over its very low level in July, no further improvement has been seen in the last two weeks.

TIN MILLS AT 40%

Tin plate mills continue to operate at about 40 per cent of full running time. In the last fortnight a few small additional orders have been placed in connection with the government's meat packing project. The trade has no data as to what proportion of the project will be carried out. The original estimate was that 7,000,000 head of cattle would be packed, involving the use of about 3,500,000 boxes of tin plate, or slightly more than the average monthly production in the first eight months of this year or last year. The matter is complicated by the fact that canners are using stocks accumulated long ago.

Forecasts as to when the automobile industry will begin buying steel in a fair way against the new models range all the way from next week to the latter part of October, the uncertainty being due perhaps to the secrecy maintained as to when new models will be brought out. A rough estimate is that production sufficient to supply each dealer with one car of each important model would engage 7 to 8 per cent of total steel making capacity for a month.

About four weeks ago the local scrap market passed from a state of extreme dullness to one of absolute stagnation. Lately heavy melting steel has been quoted on appraisal at $10.50 to $11, there being no business that would establish a market.

Imports of Gold Exceed Exports

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Gold imported into the United States during August totaled $51,780,784 while exports were $14,556,454, it was announced by the Department of Commerce.

Silver imports totaled $21,928,509 and exports, $1,741,426.

The department began issuing statistics on exports and imports of gold several weeks in advance of publication of the monthly summary of foreign commerce today for the first time.

Market Seat Sells At $2,000 Advance

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Arrangements have been made for the sale of a New York Stock Exchange seat at $78,000. This is an increase of $2,000 over the last previous transaction.

COST OF LIVING TO BE HIGHER THIS WINTER

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Unquestionably living costs are going to be somewhat higher this winter—considerably higher than last winter.

Food makes the largest item in the costs of most families, being estimated at about one-third of the total budget for laboring people.

I find that wholesale grocery prices rose sharply in August and averaged nearly 3 per cent above July. This covers canned goods, cereals, flour, sugar, coffee, etc., but not meats, milk and fresh vegetables.

Wholesale groceries in August were 10.6 per cent above a year ago, and were the highest in four years, or since November, 1930.

Most of the items rose, including cheese, cottonseed, oil, corn syrup, coffee, canned peas and corn, canned peaches, lard and flour.

FEW PRODUCTS LOWER

Only a few products were lower in August, and these are of interest to the housewife as suggesting possibilities of economy. Among them were canned salmon, canned tomatoes, tea, prunes and raisins.

It may be well to keep in mind that there has been an unusually abundant catch of salmon and that the peak will accordingly be large. So if meats and other fish get to seem too high, one may be able to help out by using more of this nutritious food. And abundant tomatoes enable one to add some of the elements the salmon lacks.

Possibly, too, a little less coffee and a little more tea may help later on, but as yet the latter is still highly compared with a year ago than coffee.

Of course, these remarks are based on wholesale prices. Retail prices move more slowly, and branded articles change less frequently. So you may not notice much difference for a while.

STATISTICS CITED

But the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics compiles a price index of all foods at retail. This shows that prices paid by consumers increased something like 4½ per cent during August, and at the end were 7.7 per cent above a year ago.

According to this authority, meats averaged 21 per cent above last year, while cereals were up 8.7 per cent, and dairy products up 8.3 per cent.

Then we have the National Industrial Conference Board's index of the cost of living, based on the retail prices of things laborers buy, including not only food but also rents, fuel and sundries. This shows an increase of 0.6 per cent between July and August, and of 3.5 per cent over a year ago.

Besides the rise in food came increases in rents, fuel and light, and clothes. (Only sundries declined slightly, owing to lower tobacco prices. Gas and electricity were reported unchanged).

RENT UP, TOO

Compared with a year ago, the board finds rents up 3.5 per cent, coal up 6.1 per cent, and clothing up 10.3 per cent.

While all this is not especially encouraging, I see no need of worrying about it. There is no real shortage of foods. Fresh beef is likely to be higher, and milk may feel the effect of high feed prices. But fresh vegetables are going to be abundant, and there is plenty of canned and cured meat in the national larder.

A good deal will depend on our standard of living. I find that factory workers in New York state show an increase in average weekly earnings of about 4½ per cent as against a year ago. With food, clothes, and coal up more than that, the average employed worker will probably have to go slow on the less necessary expenditures. But if he or she is economical, the average employed person should be able to get along as well as a year ago insofar as necessaries are concerned.

There will be millions of unemployed, however, and Uncle Sam's bill for feeding and clothing the army of the needy will be higher because of the rise in the price of food and clothes, both wholesale and retail.

UNEMPLOYED IN COUNTY HIGHER

Despite recovery programs the number of unemployed in Allegheny County has increased to between 160,000 and 170,000, and between 80,000 and 90,000 are on relief rolls, George P. Mills, executive director of the Emergency Relief Board, announced. Applicants for state relief are increasing more rapidly than at any time since January, he added.

Mr. Mills revealed that September 1, 62,000 persons were on relief, and that 10 days later the number had increased to 67,055. Of the total 53,000 were families in which there was more than one unemployable person and 14,743 were individuals, men or women, without families.

In December, he said, there were 3,440 applications for relief from persons new to the relief rolls, while in January the number of new applicants jumped to 8,900. In February there were 6,046 new applicants; March, 4,664; April, 8,769; May, 4,235; June, 3,602; July, 3,026, and August, 3,969.

In making the reports Mr. Mills stressed the fact that many of the applicants are persons who never before sought relief in any form.

Man Hurt in Crash In Highland Park

Skidding over an embankment near the reservoir in Highland Park, an automobile was stopped in its plunge by a tree. Joseph Raue, 18, of 6201 Sellers street, the driver, was taken to West Penn Hospital suffering from lacerations and body bruises.

Beck's Withdrawal From Race Filed

HARRISBURG, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—United States Representative James M. Beck, of Philadelphia, filed his withdrawal yesterday as the Republican candidate for re-election in the Second Pennsylvania District.

Other withdrawals included Henry W. Temple, Washington, Prohibition Party, United States representative Twenty-fifth District; Harry W. Montgomery, Pittsburgh, Independent, state representative, Allegheny County, Thirteenth District, and Meyer Maurer, Philadelphia, Socialist nominee for the Superior Court bench.

CHURCH BACKS LIBERTY LEAGUE

Plans are under way to form the American Liberty League of Pennsylvania as an affiliate of the national association recently organized in New York by prominent members of both major political parties, Samuel Harden Church, president of Carnegie Institute and a member of the national organization, said today.

Predicting that the organization would grow until it included "nearly everybody" in the state, Mr. Church said:

"It is to be patterned after the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment with organizations in every state and every congressional district. Our aim is to protect persons and property and oppose the tendencies subversive to personal liberties."

MARK FOUNDING OF HOSPITAL

Suburban General Hospital's 30 years of service to the sick of the Bellevue district were celebrated last night at anniversary ceremonies in Bellevue High School. Rain caused the exercises to be held in the school auditorium instead of on the hospital lawn, as had been planned.

Attorney L. K. Porter, member of the institution's original board of trustees, attended the celebration at which the principal speakers were County Court Judge Sara M. Soffel and Judge Ralph H. Smith of Common Pleas Court.

Taking part on the program also were Dr. W. J. K. Snyder, only living active member of the hospital's first staff of four physicians; Robert A. McCrea, president of the hospital, and Mrs. D. W. Zeber, head of the women's auxiliary.

Doctor Flies to Sea To Remove Cinder

CAPE MAY, N. J., Sept. 15.—(AP.)—A seaman aboard the steamship Effingham is well on his way to France today, thanks to a physician who flew 500 miles to take a cinder from his eye.

Cape May Coast Guards piloted the seaplane carrying Dr. William A. Weaver, Jr., surgeon at the station, to the Effingham after it wirelessed for medical aid, 100 miles off Norfolk, Va.

Dressler Estate Valued at $280,847

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—The estate of the late Marie Dressler, screen actress, is set at $280,847 in an appraisal subscribed to by the executor of her will, Allen B. Walker, and filed in Superior Court.

Of the total, $101,092 is in cash and $67,302 in bonds. Miss Dressler's Beverly Hills home is appraised at $35,000.

EMPIRE DREAM OF ZAHAROFF THWARTED

(This is the last of a series of articles revealing the picturesque life of Sir Basil Zaharoff, exposed in the Washington investigations as the czar of the world's "merchants of death.")

By ERNEST J. HOPKINS

Americans, unfamiliar as they are with Sir Basil Zaharoff's name and vast, mysterious deeds, need hardly feel surprised at the recent sensational revelation that he has long had a friend in the American armaments industry.

In 1919, when he apparently made his American connection, this greatest of munitions kings was a towering yet strangely secret figure.

The world had crashed around him; kings were dethroned, governments fallen, 1,000,000 human beings had lost their lives. But it all had enriched Zaharoff. With every government on the winning side indebted to him either financially or morally this mystery millionaire, whose very name was unknown or spoken in whispers, stood in probably the strongest position of any single man in the world.

OVERLEAPS HIMSELF

So he proceeded over a three-year period to give a perfect exhibit of "vaulting ambition which o'erleaped itself." He tried to use Greece, which he had brought into the World War on the side of the Allies and now controlled, as his spearpoint in the colossal dream of forming a Near East empire, by which he could dictate to Europe, play off the Moslem against the Christian, control British and French oil, make and unmake world policies and be a hidden figure greater than any king.

His Vickers stock was down, and now he invested heavily in oil. The world's greatest oil reserves were and are in Iraq and Mesopotamia, with Russian and Rumanian deposits not far northwest. When France forced foreigners to give up their oil holdings in French Algiers, three of the five directors were found to be Zaharoff men.

Zaharoff now became the "angel" for the Greek war of expansion, against the Turks. The Greek armies struck inward into Asia Minor—toward the vast oil center. His friend Clemenceau was complacent, and Lloyd George gave the Greek side his official benediction. Zaharoff is said to have financed this war to the tune of $20,000,000.

FRANCE FOILS PLOT

But Greece failed. France, perhaps getting wind of the great plot, armed the Turks. Schneider-Creusot arms overcame Vickers arms at Smyrna—there was a bloody retreat—and now, in England, questions began to be asked in Parliament about Lloyd George's support of a losing horse and the widening split with France.

Zaharoff's name came out in Parliament and, at last, this mysterious figure was hauled partly into the open. Lloyd George's resignation as Prime Minister is ascribable, at least partly, to the charges that Zaharoff was influencing England's unsuccessful foreign policy.

So the dream crashed, and Zaharoff, aged and tired, turned to other fields. He bought the controlling interest in the Monte Carlo gambling casino, and retired, a fantastic figure, still monstrously rich, but fundamentally a failure and pathetic.

DEATH SNIPS ROMANCE

It was at this time that his 33-year romance with the Duchess of Villafrance flowered into marriage, and then, on the heels of the Greek collapse, she died. Sir Basil now gave huge sums to charity in England and France. At Monte Carlo he appeared in the Casino night after night, incognito, playing at his own gambling tables—an empty game. His first act on taking charge had been to double the minimum stakes and he made Monte Carlo pay. Then he got tired of it and sold out his Casino holdings.

Today he is 85—a lonely shadow of a man. Enough of his career has been exposed so that statesmen fear to associate with him. He has written his memoirs in many volumes of longhand, giving orders that they be destroyed at his death. In all his life he has never given out an interview. To whom will he will his still vast war-fortune? Who will be the mourners at his funeral?

In some future day, the entire history of Europe for a half-century will have to be rewritten, giving proper place to the belatedly revealed, but amazing role played by Zaharoff, the greatest salesman death ever had.

OBITUARY

Charles F. Miller

Charles F. Miller, assistant division engineer of the Pennsylvania Railroad between Pittsburgh and Crestline, O., died yesterday in Valley Hospital at Sewickley.

Mr. Miller was born in St. Marys, Pa., and was active in the service of the railroad 43 years. Starting as a track laborer, he advanced through the various positions of track foreman, assistant supervisor and supervisor to that of assistant division engineer.

Before moving to Sewickley Mr. Miller lived at Gallitzin, Pa., where he was supervisor in charge of track work on the east and west slopes of the Allegheny Mountains.

Mr. Miller leaves his wife, a daughter, Marie, and four sons, Edward, Francis, Paul, and Charles F., Jr. Services will be held at St. Mary's Church, Sewickley, Tuesday morning.

TABOR HITS TAX, DUPLICATION

Our patchwork taxation system belongs to the ox-cart days of long ago, Attorney Edward O. Tabor declared in an address before the Allegheny County Building and Loan Associations in the Congress of Women's Clubs last night. He said:

"The politicians who thrive on duplication of offices and fees keep the worn-out system, and we in turn are compelled to pay increasingly higher taxes. Because of this wasteful system Pennsylvania pays four times as much to collect its taxes as Ohio pays, and partly because of this system it cost Allegheny County $69,000,000 last year to run it, and its 250 almost needless municipalities. Ohio has 80 tax collectors, while Pennsylvania has more than 5,000. The machine politicians need the jobs."

Kennedy Township Farm Show Closes

Kennedy Township's two-day Farm and Garden Show came to a close last night at the Ken Mawr United Presbyterian Church on Pine Hollow road. Cash prizes and ribbons were awarded for outstanding exhibits of canning, fruits and vegetable, needlework, flowers and pastry.

Entrants were limited to residents of the township. Mrs. C. N. Ellis was chairman, assisted by Mrs. John Hattman and Mrs. Charles Dietzel.

MARY RETURNS, DOUG ABSENT

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Declining to discuss a possible reconciliation with Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford returned here from Cleveland where she was official hostess at the national air races.

When she alighted from a train at Pasadena to motor to Beverly Hills, blue actress was met by her cousin, Sellner Chalif, and his wife. Fairbanks did not appear. She said:

"I may return to New York in the near future and probably will spend the winter there. But things are quite uncertain.

"I am under contract to lead a group of actors who soon are to compose a radio dramatic stock company. In the past, pictures have been my business and radio a hobby. Perhaps in the future this order will be reversed."

COUNTY'S BLIND GET PENSIONS

Blind residents of Allegheny County—336 of them—today had received their first checks under the new blind pension law, it was learned at the Mothers' Assistance Fund office.

These 336 had filed applications in June. Thirty-two other June applicants have unsettled cases. About a third of those applying in June were found not eligible.

The checks received yesterday have a $30 a month maximum. First payments to those who applied in July and August is expected soon.

3 TO AT TEND CANAL HEARING

Alex W. Dann, chairman of the Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal Board, accompanied by County Commissioner C. C. McGovern and George M. Lehman, board engineer, will attend the hearing on canal routes in Washington Monday, it became known today.

The hearing will be held by the United States Army Engineers. The latter's recommendation of the Beaver-Mahoning route will be opposed by friends of the French Creek route.

Dann several days ago protested to Gov. Pinchot against naming L. H. Gavin, Oil City advocate of the French Creek route, as state representative in the hearing.

While in Washington the three will try to find out what chance there is of a federal appropriation to build the canal at this time.

Homeville Firemen Observe Birthday

Twenty-five volunteer fire companies last night participated in a parade marking the Homeville fire department's celebration of its twenty-fifth anniversary. The celebration will close tonight.

Munhall Volunteer Company No. 4 won the prize for the best drum corps, Liberty Borough the prize for the best apparatus and Rankin Borough the prize for the largest unit in the parade.

Competition : : Daily Short Short-Story

By WILLIAM W. PRATT

Nine o'clock on a bright spring morning. The dimpled Mary Rand, on her way to the Lorraine beauty shop where she was employed, stopped to admire the window display of the new Madelon shop next door.

This display, put in during the night, pleased her immensely. "Lorraine's can never equal it," she said to herself. In the corner of the windows was a little card which read: "Opening May 1." That was just a week away. A smaller card advertised for expert help.

Every one in the Lorraine shop had noticed the Madelon window. The Misses Lorraine, Alice and Venetia, were discussing it in their private office.

"But I've tried to find out who is backing it!" Venetia was saying. "Everything is such a mystery. The owner is a woman, new in the game apparently, who calls herself simply Madelon. Where she comes from or what she looks like, no one seems to know."

Alice, though half owner of the shop, acted more like a junior partner to her sister. "It will all come out in the wash," she said quietly. "Why should we get excited about it?"

"Reason enough!" Venetia snapped. "It has been five years since we opened next to Margot, Inc. And what happened to them?"

"I've always felt guilty about that," said Alice. "Of course we were the cause of their failure."

"All is fair in business," reminded Venetia.

"Then let's leave this Madelon person alone."

But Venetia was not going to leave her alone. For days she worried.

Through a small peep hole she had a direct view of her own shop. The Rand girl, all dimples and pearly-white teeth, was assisting Pierre with a marcel. This rather disgusted Venetia Lorraine. The great Pierre, whom she had imported from Paris and who had created such a furor in beauty circles, had always balked at assistance. He had his own little tricks of the trade which he preferred to keep to himself.

Alice, at another desk, was busy with the morning mail.

"That Rand girl seems to have Pierre under her thumb," said Venetia.

Alice laughed. "Yes," she agreed. "I overheard one of the girls saying he takes her to dinner and the theater."

"For heaven's sake!" Venetia gasped.

"I can't say I blame him," Alice continued. "She has beauty and style and personality and brains. Even a Frenchman couldn't demand more than that."

"She sickens me with that perpetual smile," spat Venetia.

Alice swung round on her swivel chair. "You're jealous of that child's beauty," she scolded. "You'll admit she has learned more in her three weeks with us than most girls learn in three years. That girl has a head on her shoulders. Why, she even makes it her business to find out who manufactures the various preparations and what they cost us. And she remembers the name of every customer she serves."

"If she's so clever as all that," said Venetia, "I have a little proposition to offer her. Call her in!"

Mary Rand was looking rather surprised as she closed the office door. Alice waved her to a chair.

"Miss Rand," said Venetia, "you seem to be a girl of intelligence. That is why I have decided to ask this favor of you."

"Thank you," said the girl.

"Of course you have noticed the Madelon shop next door?"

"Why—yes," said Mary, just a bit surprised.

"Well, my plan is simply this." Venetia's tone was very confidential. "I want you to call on this Madelon person and apply for a position. The card in the window will tell you where to locate her. Tell her that you are not satisfied with your place here—tell her anything you wish. She'll hire you, of course. I want you to stay with her for several weeks and find out everything you can. Her methods, her prices, where she gets her supplies, the names of her customers, and above all else, her attitude toward us. Of course, your wages will go on here as usual and I'll take care of you handsomely when you return."

"But Miss Lorraine, I couldn't do such a thing!" said Mary. "It would be so dishonest."

"It's business," replied Venetia.

"But suppose someone should do such a thing to you?"

Venetia smiled. "I'll congratulate anyone who is smart enough to put it over on me," she said.

Mary Rand looked at the sisters innocently. "You're really not afraid of this Madelon person?" she asked.

"Of course not!" snapped Venetia. "She's bound to cut in on our business a little, but she'll never be able to produce an expert like our Pierre."

"But suppose she should take him away from you," said Mary.

Venetia bristled.

"That's impossible," said Alice. "She couldn't afford him."

The girl displayed her dimples.

"But you may be mistaken," she argued. "I happen to know that she has already made him a very handsome offer."

Venetia Lorraine was up like a flash.

"Did Pierre tell you this?" she demanded.

"No!" said Mary. She was facing her employer.

Alice took her sister by the arm. "Don't get excited," she scolded. "You know Pierre wouldn't leave us."

"But Pierre admitted he is very fond of the woman," Mary insisted.

"I'd like to know how you happen to be so well informed," stormed Venetia.

"That's easy," said the girl, her hand on the door knob. "You see I happen to be this 'Madelon person.'"

Monday: "A Fast Worker," by James E. Hungerford, is an absorbing tale of a youth who found romance amid the green fields when he expected to encounter only pain and despair; but he worked fast and won out.

Memory Test

Answers to yesterday's Sports Memory Test questions follow:

1—Ray Chapman was the Cleveland shortstop who was killed by a pitched ball.

2—Joe Sewell, fresh from college and without minor league experience, succeeded Chapman at second base.

3—Carl Mays was the pitcher who threw the fatal ball.

4—Dutch Schaefer was famous as one of the greatest leapers ever developed at Los Angeles College.

5—Ray Bayne was the player who came to the Pirates with Paul Waner, but failed to stick.

OFFICIAL—PITTSBURGH

NOTICE is hereby given that the following ordinance was introduced in the Council of the City of Pittsburgh on July 23, 1934, pursuant to the provisions of several Acts of Assembly, authorizing said City without petition of property owners, to open, widen, straighten, extend, vacate, grade, pave, curb, macadamize and otherwise improve streets and alleys or parts thereof, within its limits, viz:

BILL NO. 1461

AN ORDINANCE—Widening Seneca street, in the Fourth Ward of the City of Pittsburgh, from The Boulevard of the Allies to Tustin street, and providing that the costs, damages and expenses occasioned thereby be assessed against and collected from properties benefited thereby.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same, That Seneca street, in the Fourth Ward of the City of Pittsburgh, from The Boulevard of the Allies to Tustin street, be and the same is hereby widened by taking for public use for highway purposes all of the following described property, to-wit:

Beginning on the northerly line of The Boulevard of the Allies at the easterly line of Seneca street, thence north 7 degrees 00 minutes 30 seconds east along said easterly line of Seneca street 90.54 feet to the southerly line of Tustin street; thence south 82 degrees 59 minutes 10 seconds east 10 feet to a point; thence south 7 degrees 00 minutes 30 seconds west 74.33 feet to a point of curve; thence by the arc of a circle deflecting to the left with a radius of 11.75 feet and a central angle of 101 degrees 2 minues 20 seconds for a distance of 20.72 feet to a point of tangent on the said northerly line of The Boulevard of the Allies at the line dividing lots No. 54 and No. 55 in Cathrine Tustin Plan of Building Lots of record in the Recorder's Office of Allegheny County, in Plan Book, Volume 2, Part 2, page 117; thence south 85 degrees 58 minutes 10 seconds west along the said northerly line of The Boulevard of the Allies 24.51 feet to the place of beginning.

SECTION 2. The Department of Public Works is hereby authorized and directed to cause said Seneca street, in the Fourth Ward of the City of Pittsburgh, from The Boulevard of the Allies to Tustin street, to be widened in conformity with the provisions of Section 1 of this ordinance.

SECTION 3. The costs, damages and expenses occasioned thereby and the benefits to pay the same shall be assessed against and collected from properties benefited thereby in accordance with the provision of the Acts of Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania relating thereto and regulating the same.

SECTION 4. That any ordinance or part of ordinance, conflicting with the provisions of this ordinance, be and the same is hereby repealed, so far as the same affects this ordinance.

NOTICE is hereby given that the following ordinance was introduced in the Council of the City of Pittsburgh on September 4, 1934, pursuant to the provisions of the several Acts of Assembly, authorizing said City without petition of property owners, to open, widen, straighten, extend, vacate, grade, pave, curb, macadamize and otherwise improve streets and alleys or parts thereof, within its limits, viz:

BILL NO. 1685.

AN ORDINANCE widening Langfitt avenue, in the Twenty-seventh Ward of the City of Pittsburgh, at its intersection with Richardson avenue, and providing that the costs, damages and expenses occasioned thereby be assessed against and collected from properties benefited thereby and providing further for the payment of the City's share thereof.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same, That Langfitt avenue, in the Twenty-seventh Ward of the City of Pittsburgh, at its intersection with Richardson avenue, be widened by taking for public use for highway purposes the following described property, to-wit:

CHAPTER IX.

Seward, looking her up and down, smoked on. "Are you in a mad hurry to dash in there?" he asked, nodding toward the door of the inner office.

"Why, n-no! Mr. Ingram didn't ring for me. I was just taking him these letters."

"I don't believe he's in a hurry. Have a cigaret."

"I don't smoke, thanks."

"You're kidding."

"Indeed, I'm not," she said.

"Now isn't it refreshing," he mocked. "I saw you last night, you know, at Tony's with Alspaugh."

"Yes, we saw you. Mr. Alspaugh kept me working late and he said he thought he ought to feed me before sending me home. I certainly was hungry. They have the best things to eat at that place!"

"The drinks are all right, too."

"I wouldn't know about that. Except the champagne. Mr. Alspaugh ordered champagne last night. It isn't much to taste, but it seemed so exciting—having dinner in a restaurant and drinking champagne!"

To Seward such innocence could be nothing but affectation. For her part Cathleen was abashed to find how familiarly she was chattering to her employer's son. "I'll take these letters in," she murmured. "I mustn't keep Mr. Ingram waiting."

"Yes, but wait a minute, can't you?"

His plan formed itself under the pressure of her hurry to be gone. She certainly was an extraordinarily pretty girl, with a lovely singing cadence in her voice and little Irish inflections that were music to him. Why shouldn't he follow the example his father set him? And wouldn't it be poetic justice if the old man had his eyes on this beautiful secretary and his son soon grabbed her away?

Synopsis

Jasper Ingram, wealthy promoter, takes his secretary, lovely Cathleen McCarthy to his "Grangelands" estate so he can transact business while attending the charity garden party given by his wife, Laura. Cathleen, the sole support of a large family, is fascinated by the surrounding luxury and wishes she could attend the party. Marian Alspaugh, the gold-digging wife of Homer Alspaugh, Ingram's confidential secretary, is cigaret girl at the fete. She flirts with the Marques d'Albues, Mrs. Ingram's special guest. Seward, Ingram's son, is infatuated with Arline Martin, an actress, but the ruthless Arline—realizing the senior Ingram could be more helpful in furthering her career—tries to impress the latter. Later, he calls at her apartment to listen to the reading of a play, the success of which means the arrival of herself and its author—the man she really loves. Failing to interest Ingram in the play, Arline tries to win him over by flirting boldly with him just as Seward arrives. The boy leaves in anger. Father explains to son. Seward meets Cathleen.

Now Go On

Invited to Dinner

"I wish you'd come out to dinner with me some night," he said. "I'll give you champagne, too."

"Why, I don't believe—it's awfully nice of you to ask me! But I don't believe—" she hesitated, embarrassed, confused by the invitation. "I don't believe Mr. Ingram would like me to go out with you!"

"What of it? We won't ask him."

"It's not as if we knew each other outside—or ever could!"

Cathleen started again towards the door, turning back before she opened it, however, to say, appealingly. "But I thank you very much, Mr. Ingram, for asking me. Still it just wouldn't be right for you to take me—but I do wish it would!"

Her smile, as she disappeared, was warm and comforting.

Alspaugh was in the outer office, talking to the cashier.

"Hello, Mr. Alspaugh," Seward said. "Why didn't you ask me to join you last night?"

Alspaugh smirked. "We'd have been glad to have you with us, of course, Mr. Seward. I'd kept Miss McCarthy working overtime," he hastened to explain, having his own reputation to consider, "and I didn't like to send her home hungry."

"Do you often work overtime?"

"Not often, no. In a rush, sometimes."

"Let me know next time, will you?"

Alspaugh nodded, dropping one eyelid. "Sure," he said.

Dances With Seward

About the middle of the following week Cathleen telephoned to the grocery on the corner near her home and asked the kindly storekeeper to tell Mrs. McCarthy not to wait dinner for her, as she was working late and would eat in New York.

"We'll go to Tony's again, if you don't mind," Alspaugh said.

"Why, look who's here!" said Alspaugh. "I'm going to ask him to join us."

He did not ask her permission and she did not notice the omission because in her eyes Alspaugh was an important person. His presence made it all right for her and Seward to dine together. She greeted the young man with smiling friendliness.

Under her surface composure however she was hiding the emotions of an American debutante placed next to the Prince of Wales. Her mind at rest about the propriety of sitting here with him, Cathleen was able to enjoy the thrill and exulation of it. Moreover, though Alspaugh had not this time ordered champagne, Seward immediately did so. She drank only one glass, but it ended her fatigue and gave her outlook a rose color.

Work at home, work in the office, the subway, with only a rare dance or visit to the movies or excursion on a summer holiday, had hitherto made up her life. Now her world was widening. A laughing boy in evening clothes was at her elbow, throwing challenges into her eyes, playing up to her, making her feel courted and important.

Makes Date

"To think that some people go out like this almost every single night!" she cried.

"Why don't we dance?" Seward suggested.

"Me in my working clothes," she demurred.

"What's the difference? I'm supposed to show up at a party later, that's why I'm dressed. The beauty of a place like this is you can do what you like in it. Besides as you are you look better than any other girl here!"

Cathleen loved dancing, and without more urging she got up and moved off with him. She was light and vibrant in Seward's arms, stepping with graceful sureness, enjoying herself.

"I'd much rather stay here and dance with you than go on to that party," he told her.

"It's lovely," she said. "But I must be going home soon."

"If you must, but how about some other night? We know each other better now," he argued. "We know each other outside the office. Let's make a date for Friday."

"Here?" she asked. She was no longer the prudent Cathleen of the office, circumspect, old for her 22 years, but a pleasantly dizzy young creature, too happy in the moment to question the propriety of her happiness.

"This isn't the only place in town. Wouldn't you like to see some others? Listen, we'll make it Friday and I'll meet you when you leave the office; we'll have dinner and take in a show, and go somewhere afterwards."

"I'd have on my working clothes—"

"I keep telling you, I like your working clothes." She had on a freshly-laundered, crisp voile in a pretty design of two blues, the dark predominating. Its elbow sleeves had little ruffles, leaving only a few inches of milky forearm bare, and a ruffled collar turned back from her round white throat.

"Wear this dress again Friday," he ordered. "I like it. I like it a lot."

Alspaugh Doubtful

They rejoined Alspaugh and Cathleen thanked him and told him good-night prettily, and he looked after the young people with mingled chagrin and doubt. What would come of it? She was such a nice kid. If Seward were like the old man she probably wouldn't fare badly—as far as money and gifts were concerned . . . And to think that he, Homer Alspaugh, had brought them together. Why he could have had her for himself!

Seward wanted to take Cathleen home in his car, but she, reluctantly, refused that, permitting him only to take her to the subway.

"Friday's a date," he reminded her as they parted.

In the familiar atmosphere of the crowded Corona train Cathleen considered, with startled misgivings, the engagement she had made. Could it be the champagne had affected her judgment? Her hard-drinking ancestors had transmitted a good head to her, so it was a more unsettling brew than wine that was breaking down her prudence. She was tasting her youth, and indulging in an exhilarating experiment with love. Not that Cathleen called it love; but she was conscious of little tingles of joy when she thought of Seward.

It might be dangerous, even wrong, to go out with him, but she had made the engagement and she determined to keep it. Having settled this, Cathleen gave wistful thought to frocks and hats she had seen when window-shopping during her lunch-hour. If only she had more money, so she could dress as the other girls did, in chiffons and silks and laces, with dainty wraps and high-heeled satin slippers! Clothes could be bought for a song this year. If she could keep even $5 a week for herself, what couldn't she get! If only Joe had a job!

Job for Brother

Jasper Ingram was grumbling over his letters two mornings later, when she entered in response to his signal.

"Hard as ever to get good people," he said. "You'd think, with all this unemployment it would be easy to get trained, capable workers, who'd try hard to keep their jobs. Look at this letter from the Chicago office. Couldn't be worse if there was a job on every bush. Bet you'd have another job before lunch time if I let you go."

"It wouldn't be for want of trying if I didn't," she said, chilled by the mere suggestion of losing her place. "But indeed, it's not easy, sir, to find jobs. My father isn't working and my brother just doesn't seem able to find a place."

Ingram looked up at her quickly. He liked her quiet manner, her serene beauty, and her efficient work. He had not been driven to distraction, as many with less power had, by entreaties for employment, so now he said: "That's too bad. If he's anything like his sister, we should be able to use him."

On one of his cards, he scrawled, "Find bearer something to do, please," initialed it and gave it to Cathleen.

"Take that to Mr. Fisher. Maybe he can fix your brother up!"

CONQUEST OF THE WEST

People of all races left their countries to found new homes, enjoy freedom and opportunities in America. Struggling against wilderness, hostile natives, immigrants improved land, contributed to manufacture, science, art, thus repaying by the sweat of the brow their share in national wealth, opportunities in education, participation in government of the United States after becoming citizens. Mutual understanding rather than racial prejudices will help to make our country a still more desirable place in which to live. (Com. Geography)

CARTILAGE; SHOCK-ABSORBER, LUBRICANT OF BONE JOINTS

Cartilage is a tissue covering the joint surfaces of all bones serving as shock-absorber and lessening friction. It consists of comparatively few corpuscles and much smooth, elastic, intercellular matter. Being bloodless, its color is pearly white.

The cartilage corpuscles become flattened toward the surface, where they are transformed through pressure and friction into the "synovia," a slippery film acting as lubricant.

In the human body there are 230 joints (each lower limb has 25, upper limb 23, the backbone 46, the ribs—breastbone 84, the head 4) perfectly lubricated by cartilage.

Our larynx and most of the nose are of cartilage, which is also incorporated in the walls of the trachea and the bronchi, preventing their collapse. (Biology) 10-A-IX-L

MAKING MAGNETS

Some metals become magnetized (1) if near a magnet (magnetic induction) and lose it when removed. These possess permeability (e. g. soft iron). Other metals resist magnetization and demagnetization. These have retentivity (e. g. steel).

Artificial magnets are made by stroking a piece of steel with one pole of a strong magnet (2), or laying the steel on the poles of a strong electromagnet and hammering it (3), also by passing around the steel an electric current in looped wire. (4)

CURSE OF SIN—LOVERS PART—QUEEN REPENTS, TAKES VEIL, ASKS FORGIVENESS

"Pelleas and Ettarre" (publ. 1869), the eighth of Tennyson's "Idylls of the King," pictures Pelleas' disheartening experiences with cunning Ettarre and his unsuccessful encounter with Lancelot for the betrayal of the king.

The ninth Idyll, the "Last Tournament" (1871), narrates the story of Trystan, who presents the necklace won by him to the wife of King Mark; he cravenly strikes him dead.

In the tenth Idyll (publ. 1859), Lancelot, sweetheart of Guinevere, ceases to be careful; she, fearful of discovery, bids him to go.

"Arthur and Guinevere," the eleventh Idyll (publ. 1859), treats of discovery of the sinful attachment. Lancelot flees with Guinevere, they part forever with a last embrace, the queen for a nunnery, Lancelot to his castle. When found by Arthur, Guinevere, prostrate at his feet, asks forgiveness.

The "Passing of Arthur," the twelfth Idyll (publ. 1869), describes Arthur's declining days. As predicted by the ghost of Knight Gawain, he is mortally wounded in a great battle. Throwing his sword "Excalibur" into the sea, a black barge with 3 queens appears to bear him away: "From the great deep to the great deep he goes."

COKE—RESIDUE OF COAL DISTILLATION

Above: Beehive oven in which coke was formerly made. Coal burned partly in limited supply of air yielding 60-65% coke. Evolved volatile matter was burned or went to waste.

Below: Modern by-product oven that saves valuable by-products (ammonia, tar, organic compounds; combustible gases). Coal is heated in closed fireclay retorts; passing between them are flues in which part of evolved gas, mixed with preheated air, burns. By-products are obtained by cooling, washing evolved gases. Coke is pushed out from retorts and quenched.

Coke won as by-product in coal gas manufacture is too soft for smelting ores, the chief need.

WATCHING THE FOREST FOR FIRE AND OTHER DANGERS

Lasting dry weather robs the litter and sticks covering the forest floor of their humidity increasing greatly the danger of starting and propagation of a forest fire.

Rangers of the U. S. Department of Agriculture use a hygrometer (above right) which tells when the dryness reaches the danger zone, giving a warning where and when to be very watchful. Rangers use also portable radio sets to send and receive reports of marauders and other dangers in the national forests. (General Science)

What's a Problem Child?

Going back to school seems to have changed down through the sleuthsome of years.

In the old days, you walked into the James Lynd Grammar School about this time in September, hung your hat and coat on the floor, dropped your bag of hoptoads, garter snakes and dead grasshoppers on your seat and announced, "Well, I'm back."

The teacher screamed and fainted, the little girls stampeded and the boys used the teacher's inanimate form as first base in an improvised game of baseball. The janitor responded to the third alarm and tossed the boys back into the limbo of ignorance via the second-story window.

The second day the city gave you a free scholarship in the University of Incorrigibles. That's what they called it. They had teachers there who could batter you to a pulp. And make the pulp behave like a gentleman.

Today the kids are just the same. But they have new names for their capers and new schools for their cure. Now little Johnny tries to push granny down an open manhole cover, and they call him backward. If that's backward we would hate to see Johnny step forth with his gears whizzing the other way. Johnny is a delinquent. The Greeks had a word for Johnny. And Johnny has a word for the Greeks. He's got an answer for everybody.

So they gather him up in a butterfly net. Zoorerologists look him over, pin his wings back, tap his head and ask him questions. If Johnny's face has an expression like an overboiled coffee pot they segregate him as a problem child.

A problem child is any healthy kid who hates questions and answers. There ain't a thing wrong with him that a good spanking will not side track.

So, instead of wondering if you should send Jonathan to the juvenile division of the French Foreign Legion, or apprentice him as cabin boy in a stratosphere balloon, why not let him romp his fool head off and reduce the pressure on the tanks?

A tired boy is a good boy. That's one thing our teachers don't seem to know. This business of calling a robust lad a problem kid is just a gadget to make you pay for an expensive education the kid ain't going to absorb.

Isolate him if you want to. But the best bet is to toss him into a school yard with a hundred other husky lads, and let them find out who's the best. It may not muzzle him completely. But it will make him slow up on the curves.

Constitution Day Plans

Every American Should Be Acquainted With the Document—Comment on Local News

Monday will be the one hundred and forty-seventh anniversary of the signing of the Constitution of the United States. East Liberty Post No. 5 of the American Legion plans to commemorate Constitution Day with a parade in the evening through the East End business district. There will be special exercises in the schools, too. This is gratifying, but it is not enough. Every American should observe the anniversary by refreshing his memory of the Constitution.

Citizens who desire to understand our national problems cannot afford to be ignorant of the nation's basic law. Familiarity with the Constitution is particularly important at this time because of the contention that some of the New Deal policies are unconstitutional. We shall hear a great deal more about this, and Americans who are jealous of their rights and liberties will be better able to defend them if they know what the Constitution guarantees.

The story of the Constitution is of special interest to Pennsylvanians because the constitutional convention met in Philadelphia, the first capital of the United States. Hence it is important that everyone who aspires to know the high spots in the history of the state, as well as of the nation, should be acquainted with what went on in 1787 at that momentous meeting of the 40 delegates, including George Washington, who formed the membership of the convention.

Apropos of Pennsylvania history, it is gratifying to note increasing interest in it. Those who write on the subject for publication have to be very careful these days; for any error they make is almost certain to be pounced upon by students and investigators and exposed. We have examples of this in criticisms by Dr. C. Hale Sipe, the Butler historian, of some recently published articles.

*Monday will be an important day not only be*cause of the Constitution anniversary exercises, but also because it is the date set by the United States Engineers for the public hearing at Washington on the Ohio River-Lake Erie canal project. We are promised the anomalous situation of an "official representative" of Pennsylvania, appointed by Gov. Pinchot, opposing the Beaver-Mahoning route, to which the state has long been committed.

The Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal Board was created by an act of the General Assembly in 1913 and its members appointed by the Governor with the advice and consent of the Senate. The law authorized the appointment of three members not residing in Pennsylvania, and during Gov. Pinchot's administration there has been a non-resident member, Frank Purnell, of Youngstown, O. The Legislature has supported the canal board's work with appropriations.

To quote from the Pennsylvania Manual, an official publication of the state government, for the year 1931, "the Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal Board has charge of the location, construction, maintenance and operation of a canal or waterway commencing at the junction of the Ohio and Beaver rivers in Pennsylvania; thence by way of the Beaver and Mahoning rivers in Pennsylvania and the Mahoning River in Ohio to a point at or near Niles, or Warren, Ohio; thence northwardly through Ohio to a terminal on Lake Erie at or near the mouth of the Indian Creek in Ohio."

*This leaves no doubt that it is the Beaver-Mahon*ing route to which the state is committed. Certainly it is the route for which the canal board has been working and which it still favors. And it is, to say the least, perplexing that, now that the United States Engineers' Board has finally come out in favor of the route, Gov. Pinchot should send L. H. Gavin, of Oil City, to Washington as the commonwealth's representative to tell the engineers that Pennsylvania opposes it.

Notwithstanding that the French Creek route is much longer than the Beaver-Mahoning route, would not yield nearly so much traffic, and is consequently not so attractive as a self-liquidating project, some of the people up the Allegheny River are fanatically in favor of it—so much so indeed that the town of Franklin deliberately snubbed a good-will delegation from the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce because Pittsburgh favors the Beaver-Mahoning route.

When the United States Engineers declared in favor of the Beaver-Mahoning route, advocates of the rival Cincinnati-Toledo and Portsmouth-Sandusky routes accepted the decision. Not so the French Creek crowd. Without any real hope of having their own plan adopted, they are going to Washington Monday determined to do everything in their power to hurt the Beaver-Mahoning project. It looks very much like a "dog in the manger" attitude.

The canal must be an all-Pennsylvania canal, they say. No part of it must lie in another state. The federal government might well say, in answer to that, "Well, then, let Pennsylvania build it." The fact that the Beaver-Mahoning route lies in two states and would deal with interstate commerce is one of the arguments in favor of a federal appropriation for its construction.

Allegheny County's twenty-four million dollar Public Works Administration is said to be endangered by factional bickering. And it may be that the sight of a Pennsylvania delegation fighting a Pennsylvania canal project will sour the United States Engineers on the scheme. What a pity that the minority cannot relinquish its own selfish wishes and gracefully accept what is for the greatest good of the greatest number!

Scientists say that man gained his predominant position in the world of living creatures through the ability of his animal ancestors to pick up things with their hands. If we gained intelligence through the use of our hands, are we in danger of losing it through their disuse? The subject is discussed in an interesting article that will appear in tomorrow's issue of the American Weekly, the magazine distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

*Jiggs and Maggie have taken a yacht for the sum*mer. As Maggie is giving orders to the captain, the boat behaves in a peculiar manner. The reason for its strange behavior will be found humorously pictured by George McManus in "Bringing Up Father," one of the outstanding funnies, in tomorrow's issue of Puck, the Comic Weekly Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

Why did this great modern liner,
Thoroughly equipped for safety
With the most approved devices,
Yet become a raging furnace?

Were the flames incendiary?
Was there laxity or slowness?
And these questions seek an answer
In a full investigation.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Everybody I know seems caught in a swirl of self-consciousness. As though asking: "What is going to happen to me?" It's the uppermost thought, fluttering like a frightened canary against rafters of a closed room. The philosophers and economists offer little manna.

Today at a lugubrious lunch they were sledging hammer blows at the anvil of doom. Nothing could be done. Dictatorship, chaos, ruin. The horn of plenty run dry. I came out into the sunlight with smoked glasses. There appeared many empty buildings I had not noticed before.

I had picked up the wandering pollen: "What is going to happen to me?" I am not a brave fellow. I shoo flies out of the window rather than smudge them and rarely cross a current of traffic without seizing desperately upon a silent prayer. But somehow I'm not carrying torch for disaster.

A few blocks walk and I had cracked the horizon wide open. And I'm going to remain on hither side of the gulf. I may be the last, but I am going to continue one of the most confident believers. That is, I believe America is going to come out of this muddle, head high.

I mushed through another depression where they hacked our newspaper staff down to the bone and paid us half salaries in scrip. I was forced to leave quarters in an average hotel for a windowless room over a suburban drug store. There were the same end-of-civilization predictions as now. We may wander from conference to conference, up dark alleys and against stone walls. But there is a right road. Europe may not find it, but America will. Selah!

Clipping bureau readers have no interest in texts. They merely scan columns quickly for names o clients. Which accounts for John Held, the artist, receiving a clipping "Stage Door John Held." And any general reference to McIntyre and Heath ups my bill. But this haphazardry has compensation. Through a clipping today I learned that a Nervy Nat calling himself O. O. McIntyre was cutting quite a swath at a Maine resort. He was ever scheduled to deliver a talk on columning at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon. But a telegram headed that off.

Everybody's dog features some delightfully affectionate quirk that sets him apart and endears. My Boston invariably comes a bit shyly to my desk around 1 o'clock, jumps in my lap, looks at me somewhat quizzically, as much as to say "You seem all right!" Then trots into another room. At no other time does he ever jump unsolicited into my lap.

Many are under impression the famous Ziegfeld show girl, Dolores is no more. The confusion is the result of the passing of another London Dolores, a sculptors' model, who died abandoned in the squalor of a London mews. The Ziegfeld Dolores lives happily with her British husband in Paris. I watched the career of Ziegfeld's Dolores, as her exploiter, from the time she came to Ziggy a vibrant mannikin until she preened in her famous peacock costume that made her the toast of the Follies and Frolic roof. That fascinating, pantherine walk was perfected by balancing a dozen heavy books on her head and walking an imaginary tight rope for many arduous days. I saw her two years ago in the audience at les Ambassadeur in Paris. Time had feathered a white cockatoo plume in her hair, but she was still majestic glorious Dolores.

Freeman Gosden, who is the highly-pitched Amos, of Amos 'n' Andy, postcarded from the wilds of Alaska of his triumphs as a porpoise hunter. He landed five, weighing more than 200 pounds each. The porpoise is harpooned from a shotgun attached to rod and reel. When hit, it takes out a half mile of line before coming up. The meat looks like liver and has no fishy taste.

This morning through an open window I caught the faint Jersey-ward drift of that most fascinating of aromas—burning leaves. Every fall the odor suddenly surges a wavering moment when one wants to grab the duffle-bag and catch the first train home. Nothing so provides an emotional nexus with back yonder. Those of us who came away find ourselves suddenly and with a far-away look paying devoirs to something intangible we feel certain we have missed. And perhaps we have!

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

You Want Adventure? Here It Is!

You're sick, you say, of staying in the same old place—doing the same old things—never having anything happen to you.

You wish you could go off to some foreign country—into mysterious jungles . . . across sinister deserts . . . along the frozen sawtooth of some Alpine wilderness—

Adventure—that's what you want! Danger, excitement, thrills! How you envy people who have them. No wonder such people are fascinating. No wonder they remain fresh and vivid long after stay-at-home folk have become withered antiques. Adventure keeps people young like that!

You're right. It does. You're also right in thinking that your own life would be infinitely more colorful if you could escape from its narrowness and monotony. But you're wrong in thinking that you have to go to Africa or Siam, Alaska or Egypt to get it.

For there are as amazing adventures, waiting, just outside your door—as much mystery and horror, beauty and wonder and deadly danger—as you'll ever find in any jungle or ice pack.

And you'll need no education to find them . . . no ticket to admit you to them. You need only open your own eyes and look into the eyes that pass!

"Aw," you say, "I've heard all that hooey before. And I've tried it—tried to get a kick out of studying people—but it never did me any good."

Then you might as well stop yapping for jungles, partner. If you can't get a thrill out of the passing show, you wouldn't get it out of China, either. For adventure doesn't lie in the scene we see—but in the eyes with which we see it. And Bali will bore you just as much as Brownsville if you look at it with the same stupid self-absorption.

Why hasn't it done you "any good" to study people before? That was why. Because you never really saw those people. You never were touched by the mystery and menace of their private lives. Their faces passed you—but in those faces you saw only yourself and your own problems. And so there was no new thrill in that spectacle for you—no adventure or escape.

Do you want—really want—to find adventure? And, incidentally, hand yourself a big surprise? Then try this—

Take an afternoon off, or an evening. Leave your house and for TWO HOURS walk up and down any street where you will meet many strangers, or sit in any central spot where many strangers are passing by . . . AND STUDY THEM.

Don't think about yourself. Don't compare those faces and their obvious problems with your own. TRY TO READ THEM AS YOU WOULD READ SOME FASCINATING BOOK. TRY TO SEE IF YOU CAN GUESS WHAT LIES BEHIND EVERY PAIR OF EYES.

Hitherto eyes have been just eyes to you. But before you have been there five minutes, you will see that no two pairs of eyes in the world are alike. There are shamed eyes, and defiant eyes, desperate eyes, sick eyes . . . eyes that are like dirty window panes which have been shut for many a dreadful year . . . eyes that are like skinned souls, with their bleeding naked for all the world to see. And there are triumphant, challenging eyes. And eyes that have won peace at a great price.

But how much of all this will you be able to see in those two hours? I wonder. That's the test. Sit there! Watch!

THEN GO HOME AND TRY TO WRITE DOWN WHAT YOU'VE SEEN. Not ALL you've seen—but just what you have seen in half a dozen faces. Out of those hundreds who passed, try to discover and describe the secret life of just six spirits.

You don't think that's much of an experiment? Yet, by just such seemingly humdrum jaunts, those who know how to look find adventures to set the whole world sobbing, laughing, shuddering or blazing with indignation. Out of just such jaunts Odd McIntyre writes his daily column—Damon Runyon, Mark Hellinger and Jack Lait compose daily or weekly stories.

You want an adventure? All right, it's yours. Provided you have just one thing. And that is—WHAT IT TAKES!

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

The Wise

It is good in the Springtime to wander with laughter.
Adventuring gaily down paths all unknown
With no thought for the Winter whose storms must come after
The last song is carolled, the last rose is blown;
With no thought of the lonely, long hours that come only
To lives whence the Summer and sunlight have flown.
But the wise take their Springtime
as birds do, for mating
And for raising a brood that remembers its nest.
So that after youth's years there will be no lone waiting,
But only the glories that rise in the west.
When the sun is descending, the long day is ending.
And life at its closing is life at its best.

'Safety at Sea' Act

THE parallel investigations at New York City of the steamship Morro Castle disaster necessarily have different objectives.

It is the duty of the Federal Grand Jury, advised by United States Attorney Conboy, to ascertain if personal culpability in the catastrophe calls for censure or for criminal indictment.

In the field of civil jurisdiction the Department of Commerce inquiry must search for original or contributory causes of the mysterious ship fire and its attendant appalling loss of life, with a view to procuring preventive regulations against recurrences of such horrors.

And the session this week in New York City of the American Association of Port Authorities, Inc., has served not only to emphasize the responsibility of government to promote safety at sea, but also to bring into public attention an evident failure of Congress to measure up to this responsibility.

UNTIL the Morro Castle fire the wreck of the Vestris was the great sea tragedy in eastern waters of recent years. Several investigations of that disaster were made.

The American inquiry proved to be less revealing than the one held by British authorities, and the British criticisms and recommendations went much farther than ours.

The numerous disclosures made the fact apparent that this country's navigation laws were insufficient—and one might suppose that Congress, remembering the loss of life on the Vestris, would have proceeded diligently.

Quite t othe contrary, however, Congress has been inhumanely negligent.

For Congress—as Frank G. White, of San Francisco, reminded the Port Authorities meeting—has failed to enact the "safety of life at sea act."

This act, as Mr. White explained, was prepared by the leading experts of various nations in joint session, including American experts.

It has been adopted by 15 of the most important maritime nations, and its enactment by the United States has been recommended by the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations.

Consequently, there seems to have been no reason for its non-enactment except Congressional negligence.

THE "safety of life at sea act" is described as "extending to the most advanced hull construction, life-saving appliances and radio apparatus which could be devised by the experts."

As a matter of truth, the Morro Castle was a new vessel, one of the most modern afloat, and the provisions of the safety act, if in effect, might or might not have altered the ship's construction or equipment.

That is not the point.

The point is that sea tragedies occur, and every civilized government ought to do all it can to minimize both their occurrence and their fatal consequences.

Congress did not do so when called upon to act after the Vestris accident.

Will the fate of the Morro Castle influence Congress in January to pass the "safety of life at sea act"?

Search for the Secret of the Stradivarius Violins Indicates It Was in the Kinds of Wood Used

By Edwin C. Hill

A BOSTON woman has paid a fine price, possibly $100,000, for one of the 400 violins in existence which bear the name of the maker Antonio Stradivari.

Every now and then the "discovery" of a Stradivarius is reported from some garret or warehouse, only to have the experts shatter the dreams of the finder with the verdict that the violin is only a copy or a counterfeit. There has not been a genuine find in 80 years, and the whereabouts of the real ones are known, from the $150,000 Messiah Stradivarius in the British Museum all the way down the list through the other 399.

The violin maker of Cremona lived 65 years, from 1664 to 1729, and at the height of his career was a stern-looking man of the Cromwellian type, with dark eyes and flowing hair. All told he modeled and varnished 1,900 violins, and set up his craftsmanship and that of Cremona as the model for all time. Those that remain in the hands of the music masters or in the vaults of the collectors today would bring in the aggregate about $20,000,000.

Seidel's Violin Is Tested

TWENTIETH century science is constantly probing into the seventeenth century craftsmanship, seeking to learn the secret of the quality of the Stradivarius. Toscha Seidel, the violinist, submitted his instrument to tests by Dr. William B. White, and photographs of the sound waves showed the Stradivarius triumphant in the most severe tests of modern acoustics. Dr. White and Seidel decided that the secret of the Stradivarius was the simplicity and symmetry of its fundamental vibrations, and this, in turn, they concluded, was the result of Stradivari's slow and patient construction, his exquisite tonal sense and the mellowing of time.

A common belief through the past two centuries has been that Stradivari possessed a secret formula for varnish, and that therein was the reason for the superb quality of his violins. He did have the formula, and no one has been able to duplicate the orange-red, soft coating which he gave to the wood.

However, they put one of his instruments under the X-ray at Purdue University recently, and the findings there seem to explode the theory that it was all a matter of varnish. The Indiana professors discovered that the top part of the violin was of a material in which the fiber structure was almost completely gone and the crystallites of cellulose in the wood were distributed at random. Their verdict was that it was the selection of the proper type of wood—spruce for the front and maple for the back—and not any special treatment of the wood, or varnish, or age.

As rare and as rich as is a violin made by Stradivari, there are others by craftsmen of the Cremona school which are held in as high repute. His pupil, Guarnerius del Jesu, produced an instrument which was preferred before the master's by the great Paganini. A Guarnerius today fetches as much as $100,000; and there are also the violins of Carlo Bergonzi, which the celebrated Belgian player Ysaye said were finer than those of Stradivari.

Business Motif For Postoffices

GRAECO-ROMAN architecture is all right to house and administer the codes of Justinian, but when the government gets into business, public buildings must become business-like structures. This seems to be the logic of Secretary Morgenthau's announcement that the old mausoleum type of postoffice is out. The new ones will be snappy business structures, designed for efficiency, economy, general all-around utility in dispatching government business, and the incidental esthetic integrity which comes from utility.

Under both President Hoover and President Roosevelt, other public buildings have gone a long way in this direction, and it may be that one of the by-products of these chaotic years will be the wreck of many of those gloomy old monstrosities, mongrels most of them, and the substitution of something all our own. Maybe we're headed for an esthetic as well as an economic "autarchy."

One often wonders Why America, with its fine colonial beginnings, got so desperately fouled up with extraneous fixings and old moth-eaten tradition in developing both its public and private architecture. It seems that much of this ugliness must have resulted either from evil premeditation or high-proof liquor, but probably not. We were feeling our oats in those days and somehow we just had to drag in everything lying around loose. It was a grand free-for-all, with no hard boiled de Medici to summon a Michel Angelo or Leonardo da Vinci, have them fix up a unified plan and put it over.

Flagrant Waste In Public Buildings

THIS is, of course, a delicate subject to broach to any taxpayer, but if he will look around a bit he will find that for a great many decades he has been paying, not only for ugliness, but for flagrant and irretrievable waste. Any architect will tell you that these big, smeary, depressing, slate-gray federal dinosaurs—aesthetically as extinct as the diplodocus—represent just about 50 per cent waste, aside from their being eyesores. They have a corridor big enough to hold a three-ring circus. In the feudal tradition, they have walls about three times as thick as necessary. They frequently are designed without regard to easy and free access and there is huddle and confusion instead of the easy flow of business which marks a properly designed business building.

One may make some emphatic reservations about shoveling in more federal funds for even adequate and beautiful buildings at this time, but, inexorably, the whole government establishment—city, state and federal—expands; and, things being as they are, it seems all to the good when skilled and soundly educated architects are taking a hand in the new building enterprises, as they are now doing. If and when all this gets paid for, there will be, at any rate, a residue of sound and authentic American architecture, adapted to public need and with no filching from alien cultures.
